The Path Once Taken

As the year unfolded and our futures became evident to us, we grew, and the paths we chose remained unique to us as individuals. Though some encountered rocky experiences, others sailed a smooth ride. The roads we traveled made us stronger, helped build lasting friendships, and eventually brought us to a common destination. We remembered the journey as we traveled down The Path Once Taken. by Lupe Riojas and Bernadette Hinojosa

Top 6 Reasons to Get a Life:

Because everyone else has one.

Sonic closes at 11:00 pm.

"Star Trek" went off the air.

Going to "Chuck-e-Cheeze's" isn't what it used to be.

Because you've already seen all the "Saved by the Bell" re-runs five times.

Because those 1-900 numbers are getting expensive.

Two's Company...

Three's a Crowd when Worlds Collide

Couples walked down the hall hand in hand. Relationships became a common gossip among students.

"I think relationships work better if two people were friends to start out," senior Chris Allman said. Best friends often became sweethearts and sweethearts often became best friends.

While some people had a hometown "sweetheart," there happened to be those few who chose distant companions.

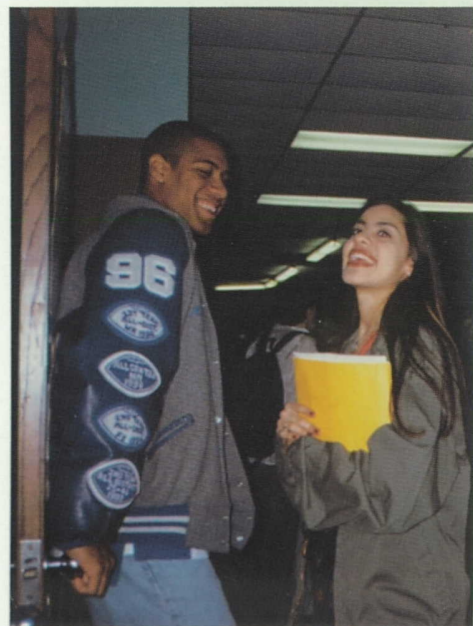

"I'm dating someone from another school," junior Jennifer Lankford said. "That makes each moment together more special."

Some students chose to put their studies ahead of their romantic interests.

"I really don't have time for a relationship, but I keep an open mind," junior Heather Williams said.

There existed quite a few variations in the word...relationship. High school, the time when students really found out who they became. Changing went on within all kinds of relationships. That was when students realized just how well they knew their companions.

Whether it was at home, away, or not at all, relationships remained forever a part of the high school experience. by Hillerie Staton

Time Out for Fun

Students make their plans for after hours

At 3:45 p.m. the bell rang to release most students from school, yet still a few lingered after hours.

After school practices not only helped those involved in extra curricular activities to excel, but also laid the foundation for making friends.

"Since I was new, the before and after school practices were hard to adjust to, but now I think that they're great," sophomore Georgette Allison Nunez said. "I've met so many new people, and learned lots of things about the friends I already have."

Wherever people went, whatever people did, they always had time to add some fun into their after school schedule.

"When I get out of school at 3:45 p.m. on Fridays, it's party time," sophomore Susie Williams said. "There is no telling what my friends and I will do."

From Friday night dates to Sunday night cramming, students managed to fit all of their planned activities into such little time.

"On the weekends I enjoy going bowling or to the movies, or just hanging out with my friends," junior Cheryl Kleinhans said. "Weekends are what make the week worthwhile." by Andrea' Smith

Fans Rally for Fellow Classmates

No sporting events were complete without the roar of the fans. The fans cheered the players through victory and cried with them through defeat.

"I thought the fans were really great," senior Fill Reeder said.

Even the ex-football players remembered the support fans gave.

At every game the band lead the fans in spirited song.

"I think the band makes up half the fans," senior Ryan McElroy said.

Changing seasons discouraged some of the less "die-hard" fans.

"I don't like coming to games when it's cold because of the metal bleachers," junior Amanda Johnson said. "Otherwise, I never miss a game."

Though their reasons for coming varied, most stayed because of their love for the game.

"No matter the outcome, the game keeps me glued to my seat," sophomore Erin Vargo said. by Dylan Roberts

Chain Reaction Trends Spread Like Wildfire

The latest fashion, coolest image and the "in thing" adorned the student body all in the name of trendiness. From garb to taste in music or hair; some students traveled the path least taken alone, while others jumped head-first onto the bandwagon.

Most notably, the alternative look stayed in, bringing with it chain wallets, jelly shoes, tight tees and sagging pants. Posing as an alternative choice, basic black lipstick cast quite a shadow on the make-up scene.

"Everyone tries so hard to be so different from everyone else, that everyone looks the same," sophomore Rob Smith said.

The waves of communication also made quite a splash. Digital pagers, CB's or cellphones beeped, rang or vibrated their ways onto the list of trends.

"I really want a CB for my truck so I can mingle with the truckers," junior Michael Howard said.

The basic tee-shirt was updated into splendid arrays of Mossimo, Stussy, No Fear and Yaga slogans. Birkenstocks and Doc Martens made tracks up and down the hallways.

Having a good head on your shoulders was always described as a valuable asset. Sideburns, dangerously short cuts and haircoloring were some of the new hair-raising trends seen between classes.

"A lot of people have gotten the 'Friends' haircut, as well as a lot of dyeing; Kool-Aid is in," sophomore Sally Spurgeon said.

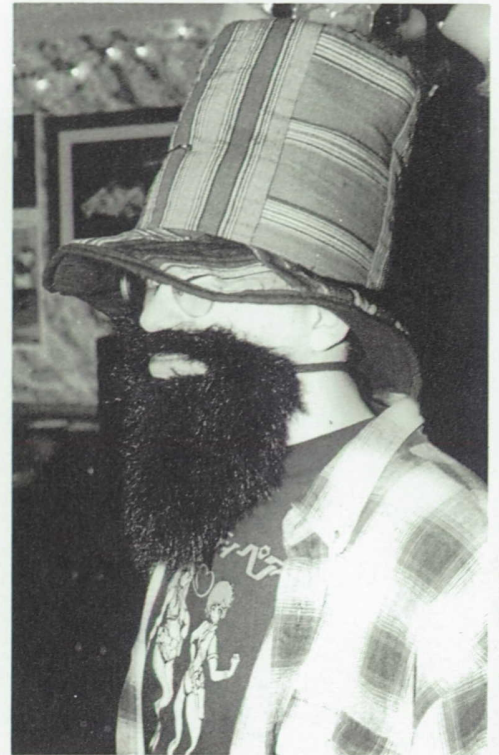

Whether students followed trends to fit in with the rest of the crowd, to display admiration, or to be different, trends still played a major role in daily school life. by Myra Hernandez

Eagles Unite

Students Cheer on Eagle Teams

Colorful posters and streamers livened up the gym scenery. Cheers and chants echoed throughout as the Eagle band played the fight song.

"I think that pep rallies boost team and school spirit," senior Mark Rangel said.

Teachers, fans, and cheerleaders all helped to make the pep rallies memorable.

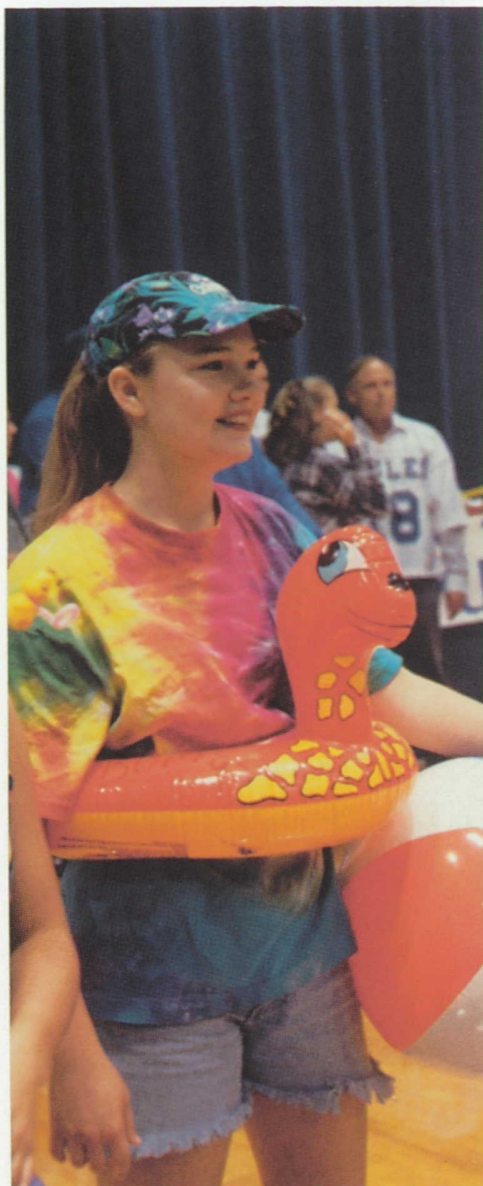

Students played an important role in making the pep rallies successful, from dressing up in a variety of crazy outfits to following the themes set by the varsity cheerleaders.

"My favorite theme was Beach Bum," freshman Scott Rodgers said. "I enjoyed watching the football players and cheerleaders do the stunts."

Cheerleaders offered themes to the student body such as Senior Day, Battle of the Classes, and Wild and Crazy to boost school spirit. "I love going to pep rallies and joining in on the cheers," sophomore Rob Smith said.

Steps to the Crown

Hours of Preparation lead to the big moment

As homecoming drew near, numerous students began to get dates, buy mums and prepare for the upcoming game.

"I was waiting and waiting for the game to arrive," sophomore Shad Amed said.

The Student Council helped to organize the mum sales and to decorate the halls and dances to keep spirit boosted for the game.

The clanking and banging noise of the bells sounded throughout the day and they brought even more excitement to the pep rally. During the pep rally the students were introduced to the nominees and their escorts.

"The pep rally helped to keep all the students pumped up and gave the students a good chance to view all the homecoming nominees," sophomore Jenna Kelly-Landes said.

At half-time the students' votes finally came in. Nervousness fell over the nominees as the moment arrived. The winners were Fourth Dutchess Shannon Mosley, Third Dutchess Denise Keller, Second Dutchess Renee Umstatt, First Dutchess Kristie Killen and the 95'-96' Homecoming Queen Jessica Hobratsch.

A CROWNING MOMENT... Walking arm in arm, seniors Tanner Wuthrich and Jessica Hobrastch enjoy their moment in the spotlight. Mr. and Miss GHS received their titles during coronation ceremony.

Glamour and Glory Traditional Events Showcase Year

Some of the most entertaining events presented throughout the year included Miss Año Nuevo, Coronation, and the Talent show.

The Spanish Club hosted a fundraiser, Miss Año Nuevo, and spent money earned at the pageant on scholarships for seniors. The night consisted of a group dance, talent exhibition, an evening wear display, and a prefinalist interview.

"It's amazing how some of the guys actually captured the essence of a woman," junior Andy Perry said.

The group of contestants was narrowed down to three finalists. The second runner up title went to Daniel Carrizales as Marga Rita, and first runner up was given to Johnny Brashear as Honeysuckle Peaches. Duece Green and Austin Townsend as Loretta and Lulu reigned as queens for the night.

Coronation proved to be an exciting night for class favorites and Mr. and Miss GHS. The night began with the naming of the class favorites. The freshman class chose Russell Sims and Natalie Shimek as their favorites. Buell French and Erin Vargo took the title for the sophomore class. Jill Holubec and Austin Skaggs won for the juniors. For the first time in four years, a change in the senior favorites occurred. Seniors Renee Umstatt and Chris Washington took the honor for class favorites.

The conclusion of the night came with the crowning of Mr. and Miss GHS. Seniors Tanner Wuthrich and Jessica Hobrastch were nominated by teachers and elected by peers.

"I feel that Mr. and Miss GHS were well chosen this year," senior Carrie Woodley said. "Jessica and Tanner are the epitomy of what school pride and involvement are all about."

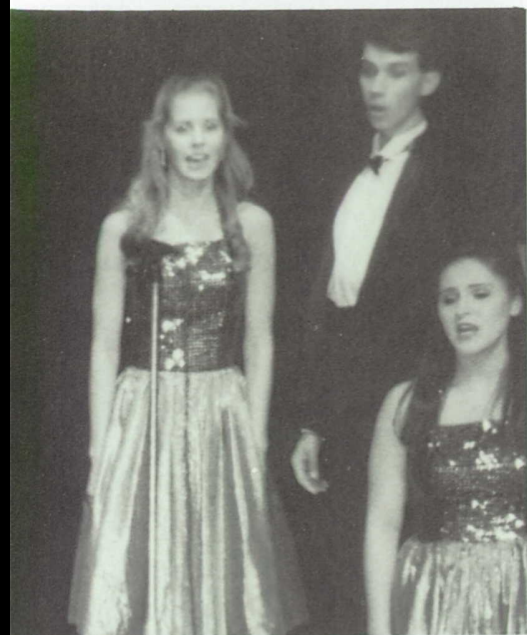

The Talent show, sponsored by choir, consisted of performances put on by students. Preparing for the talent show involved finding judges, getting students and faculty to participate, setting up the gym, and various other tasks.

Chris Allen, Patrick Blanton, Jesse Bryant, Sean Conner, Justin Mosely, Adrian Uscategui, Jason Warren, and Chris Washington showed off their musical talents at the show. The judges selected the band "Plain" as overall winners.

Andrea Smith performed a singing act and captured second.

Pack Your Bags Musicians Travel for Trophies

Over 200 musicians of two forms dispersed to separate destinations with the same goal: to reveal their talents and to show a little of what Texas beholds.

The band piled into four buses that would take them on a 24 hour drive to Florida, while the choir boarded planes to fly to Virginia Beach, VA.

The drive proved long and unfavorable for band members. Complaints dominated conversations readily.

"It was absolutely horrible," senior Ryan McElroy said. "At least there were movies to pass the time and to forget about the stench."

The morning after arrival, five choirs contended in the east coast competition, stunning their competitors.

"We received lots of compliments as we exited the stage," junior Tracy Ferguson said. "We almost had too much energy."

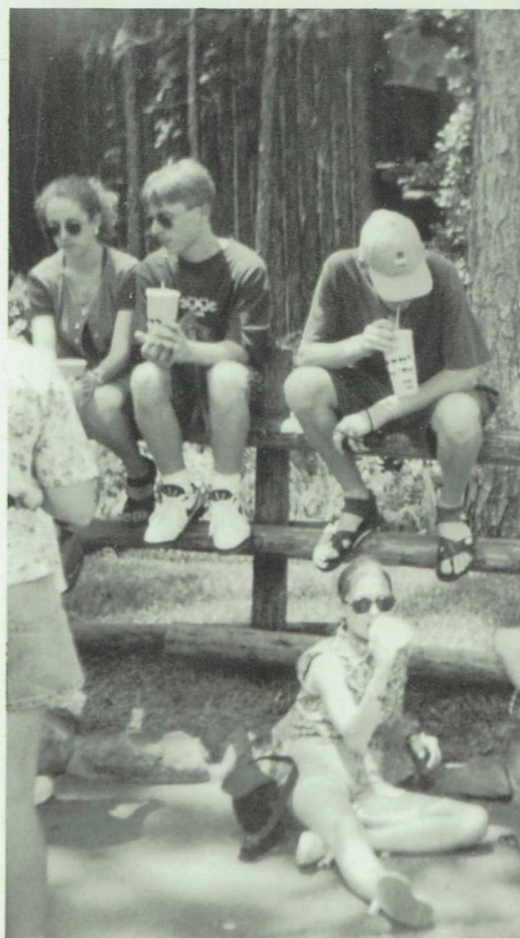

The choirs did exceptionally well, and won first place with Boys and Show, second place with Treble and Mixed, and third place in the Jazz category. The Symphonic and Honor Bands also did well. They brought home Best in Class and Best Overall trophies for the competitions.

"I am really proud of how well we did," junior Katherine Jones said. "But there are still some areas that need improvement."

With the stress of the competitions in the past, the fun had really begun.

Choir members scattered to ride the roller coasters of Busch Gardens and swim in the Atlantic Ocean, while the band members lost themselves in all that the Epcot Center, Magic Kingdom, and Universal Studios had to offer.

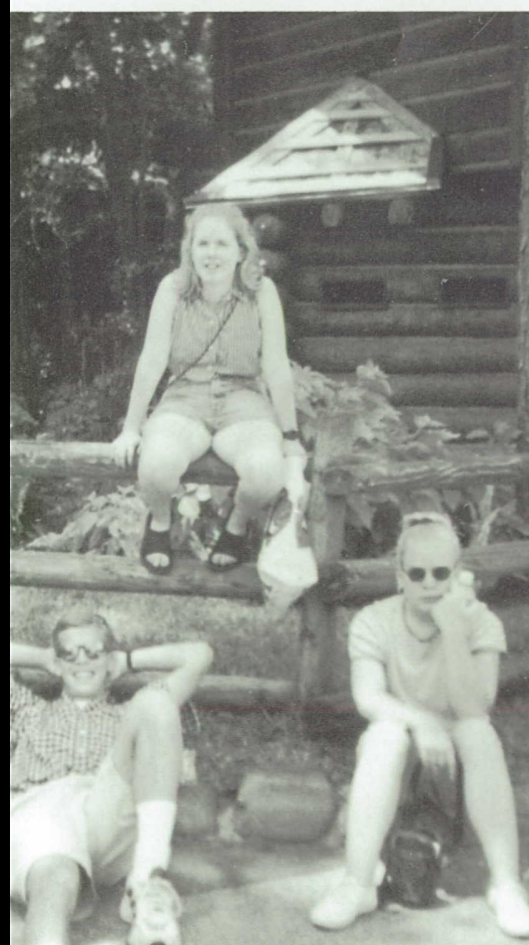

"It was probably the most enjoyable band trip I have ever been on," junior Hillerie Staton said. by Joel Darling

Working for a Living Students in the Work Force

At 8:30 a.m., August 17, the summer abruptly ended, and school began. To some, this meant the end of tanning on beaches and flying to exotic places. To others, it meant either the end of a job or the beginning of a chaotic year.

"Once you find a good job, you should keep it, because it may be hard to find another one," senior Whitney Reiersen said.

School schedules and other activities left little room for some students to work. Although jobs became time consuming, pay checks drove students to continue.

"It takes some of my spare time, but the pay check is worth it in the end," junior Emily Walters said.

Numerous students did not have enough spare time to consider obtaining a job. Extracurricular activities filled the time not taken by school itself.

"Because of Georgettes, I don't have time to work," sophomore Jenny Grimes said.

Sometimes, parents persuaded their children to get a job in order to pay for their expensive lifestyles. Car insurance, gas, and weekend activities gave teenagers a taste of the real world.

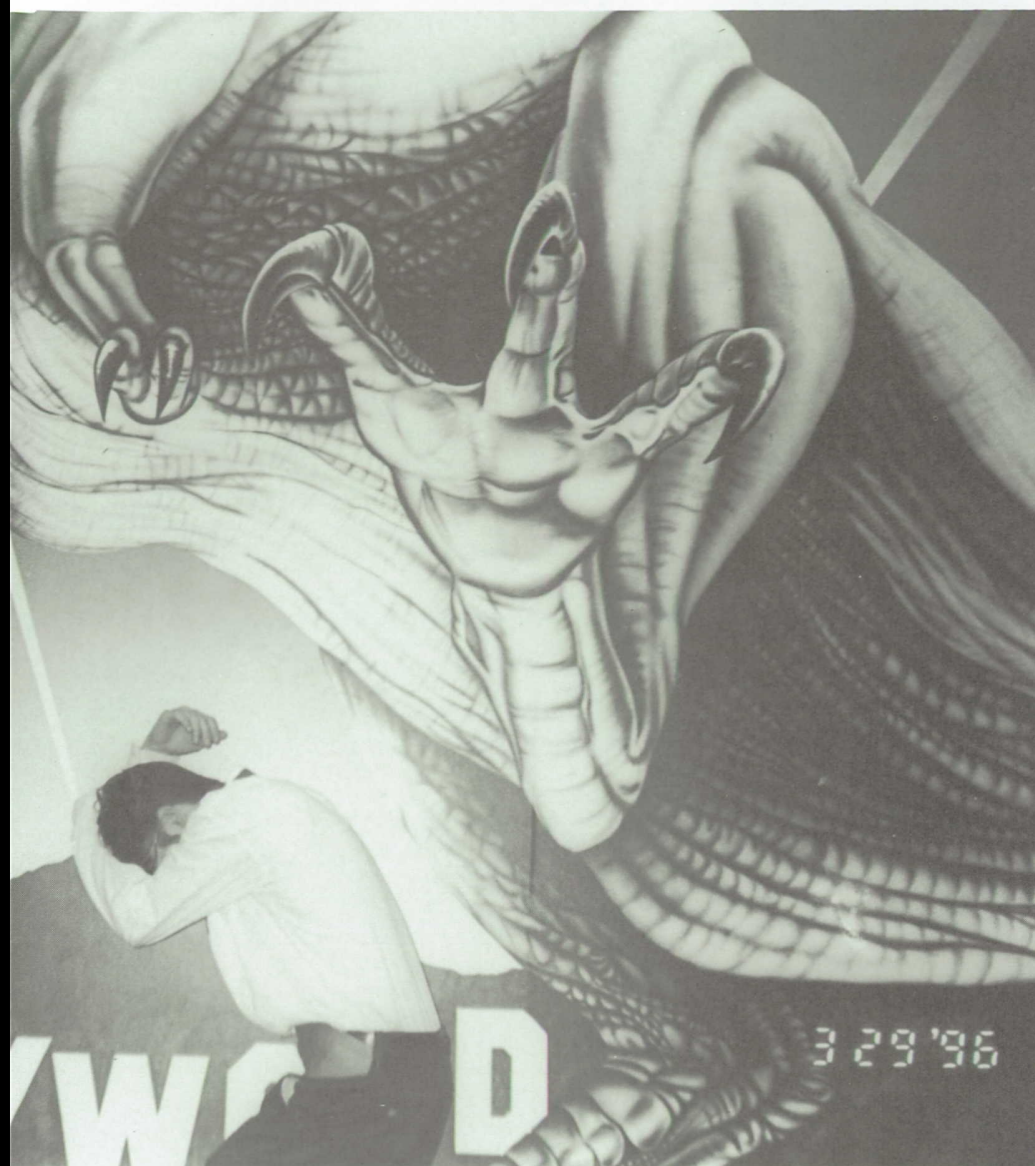

"My parents feel I should be responsible for my own car insurance," senior Mark Canales said.

Other than money, work provided experience and preparation for future employment and careers.

"Working at St. David's was very rewarding," senior Michelle Rogers said. "I learned a lot about the field I would like to go into." by Joel Darling and Allison Enke

Money, Money, M...

Hard Work Turns into Hard Cash

Money, the lifeblood of a teenager, flowed quite freely through the hands of those who possessed it. Whether it be on fun or necessity, teenagers loved to spend their cash.

At lunch, students from every grade lined up to buy their lunches.

"Maybe I'll get a potato and some chicken strips," junior Andrea Whitehead said.

On an average, every student who bought their lunch spent at least $1.50.

"My parents are making me pay for my own car," sophomore Michael Laszewski said. "So, I have to get a job."

Cars, a major interest for older teens, took significant cash to sustain.

Upper and under classmen slaved long hours to earn money for their cars.

"I'm spending it in, and on, Germany," junior Jaycee Currier said.

Students dreamed of exciting ways to spend their money during the summer. Traveling to exotic locations and beautiful scenery, though expensive, created new memories and stories for those who could afford the trips.

Some students chose to use their money to party on the weekends, but others selected a shopping spree.

"I am going tomorrow with my mom to buy a whole new wardrobe," sophomore Wendy Nelson said.

Even though cash did not grow on trees, teens threw their money at any chance to enlighten their lives, no matter the costs or sacrifices. by Brian Bopp, Greg Leinweber, Lauren Brady, and Nicole Brunner

Wait a Minute... Hobbies Fill Spare Time

Back in the beginning of mankind, there was a caveman named Ugh. He decided to pick up some rocks and save them, thus the first hobby.

Hobbies popped up everywhere. The big question was what exactly was a hobby.

"A hobby is something you like to do," sophomore Greg Dunlap said.

Others probably thought that a hobby was something they did quite often.

"It's something you do in your spare time," junior Brandy Harrison said.

With all of the stresses of school, homework, jobs, and extracurricular activities, most thought that students had little spare time to fill.

While this held true for some students, quite a few managed to fill their spare time with unusual activities.

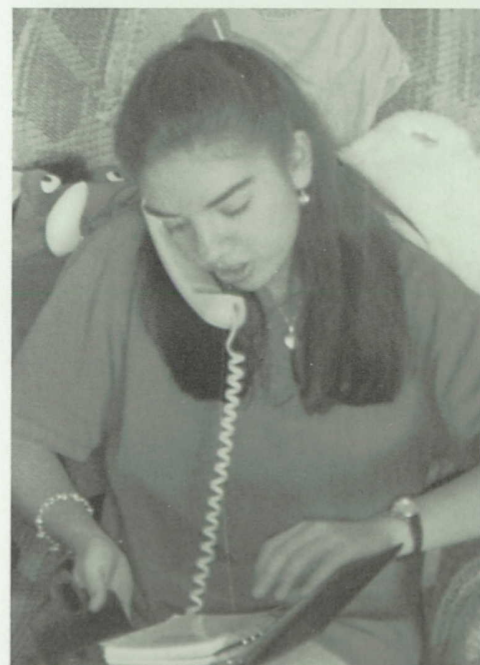

"My favorite activity is ice-skating," sophomore Amaris Van Dyke said. "I also like to run, play soccer, and I have football training every day after school and on Saturdays."

Whether playing basketball in their driveways, watching television, or writing poetry, students always took advantage of these precious moments to relieve their minds from the pressures of school.

"I usually spend most of my time reading," sophomore Lyndsey Painter said. "I also swim, draw, and I like to cook."

Other students had strict schedules that left them with little extra time.

"I really don't have much free time, but when I do, I really enjoy trying new things," senior Beth Trainor said. by Wesley Russell and Russell Hogg

Lasting Ties Between Friends

When school started new friendships began to blossom. Several unfamiliar faces filled the halls. Some made new friends, while others picked up from where they left off.

"If it wasn't for my friends, I don't know how I'd make it through the day," senior Jackie Levy said.

Students relied on their friends to keep them going through the week and help them when in need.

The weekends varied little for friends and siblings in which discussion arose about the upcoming weekend plans.

"I like Fridays because it's my time to go out and meet up with my friends," sophomore Allison Nunez said.

Siblings also played a major role in friendships. Students had special relationships with their brothers and sisters and often relied on them for numerous things including protection, transportation and support.

"I like having my older brother here so he can take me to school," sophomore Amber Wood said.

As the end of the year approached, seniors said goodbye to friends and memories. Seniors often wondered what would happen between them and their friends after graduation, since the majority of them would be miles apart.

"I'm really looking forward to graduating, but I will miss seeing all my friends," senior Erin Hubby said. by Laurie Kimble

Springing Free

Breakers Escape School Confines

One full week away from lectures, teachers, and homework finally arrived. The chattering of anxious students reverberated throughout the halls as people discussed spring break plans. A few stayed in town, while some traveled to exotic destinations.

"The Grand Canyon was great," senior Nisse Perkins said. "Two days of sun then two days of snow...you can't beat that."

Some church youth groups and organizations took vacations to broaden their cultural horizons.

"I went to Glen Rose, Texas, to be a counselor for young children and their grandparents," junior Hailey Meredith said. "It was a great learning experience, and I wish it would have lasted longer."

Still, others chose to stay home and relax during the break.

"I stayed home to catch up on homework, but it was too short," junior Valerie Ruiz said.

Pride and PALS sponsored a "Sober Road Trip '96" campaign for drug awareness. The day before Spring Break, a coffin was brought into the main entrance of the school as members of the club silently mourned beside it. Before the day ended, sunglasses, tee shirts, and miniature footballs were handed out to promote a drug-free spring break.

Unfortunately, all of the vacations came to an end. Students and teachers went back to continue the final strenuous weeks left of school. by Bernadette Hinojosa and Lupe Riojas

The Good Ole Days

Times Remembered, Not Forgotten

Over the years, students acquired moments in their lives that they had definitely not forgotten.

Vacations and get togethers with friends provided for a variety of unforgettable experiences.

"Valerie fell and broke the sink at Skate 8," junior Kelly Andreasen said. "Something exciting always happens when I'm with my friends."

Students also took pride in passing from one grade level to the next.

"I passed the 9th grade," sophomore Nick DeLuca said.

Time spent with friends from out of town often made memories.

"The Friday night when Laurie and I hung out with the Iowa Baseball team," senior Jackie Levy said. "All 24 of them!"

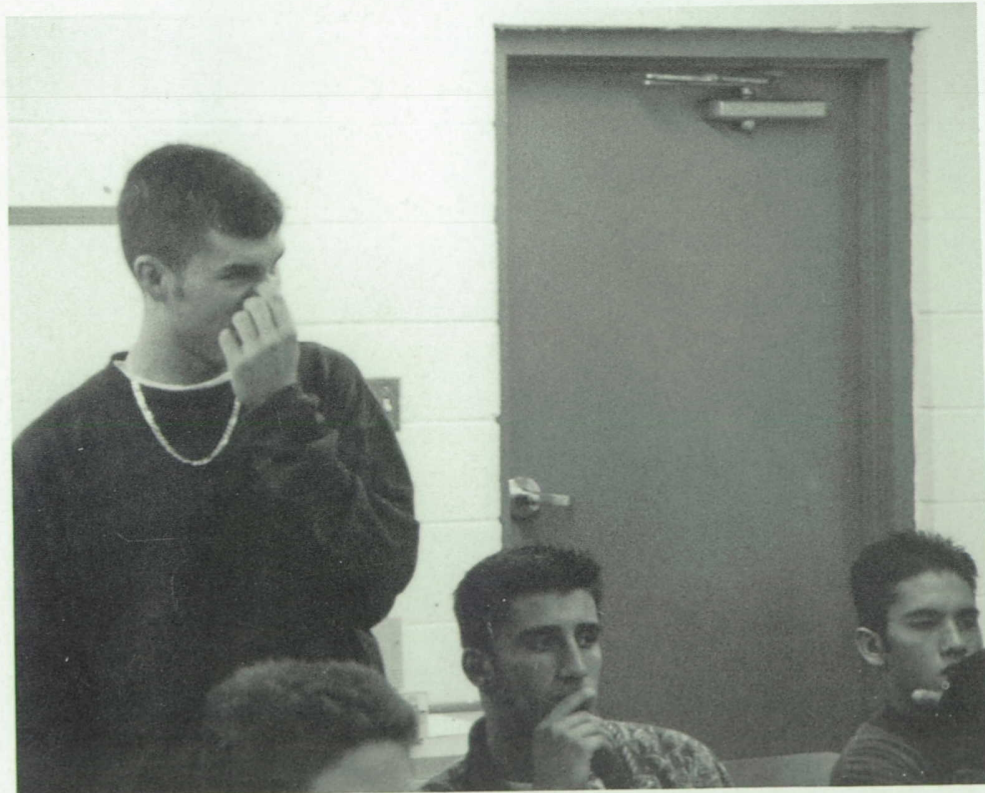

The embarrassing moments of some served as a great laughing experience for others.

"My first day of being a library aid, when I forgot to put the library books through the scanner and about 45 students walked through the security gate and everything locked up and started to beep," junior Hope Martinez said. "I had to check out every book all over again."

Students said good-bye to friends, but not to the friendships.

"When you have a senior best friend and they go to college after graduation, it's really sad," junior Roxanne Nemec said. "You're happy for them, but now your best friend is gone and you're left all alone." by Karin DeLuca and Corrie Freisem

Unforgettable Prom Lives Up to Theme

Anticipation filled the air as hundreds of party-goers stepped through the doors of the Wyndham Hotel in Austin. Tables covered with refreshments of all kinds awaited them, accompanied by a four foot tall ice sculpture in the form of '96.

"I never believed we were going to have an ice sculpture until I saw it," junior Tracie Price said. "I was impressed."

Photographers set up inside the lobby area captured the formality of the occasion.

"It was great seeing all my friends dressed up," senior Tanner Wurthrich said.

Enthusiastic faces gathered onto the dance floor and awaited the announcing of the awards. Awards ranged from funniest laugh to couple of the year.

After the awards ceremony, the local band, Plain, took the stage and played a personal selection to enhance the evening.

"It think prom is definitely a big improvement from last year," senior Nisse Perkins said.

Although the meaning of unforgettable might have appeared to have been more intense in the movies, both upper and underclassmen who ventured to the prom agreed that the atmosphere would linger in the minds of those who attended. by Kristy Hagler and Vanessa Greenwalt

DISCO INFERNO! While watching the live band perform, senior Greg Beck listens to his date, junior Antoinette Curl, as she questions their plans for the evening. Stepping Stone

Grads Trade Old Paths for New

Family and friends filled the bleachers of Eagle Field as the class of '96 gathered in the endzone. Dressed in blue caps and gowns, the graduates anticipated the moment that would mark an end to childhood and a beginning to fresh opportunities.

"I've waited so long to walk across the field, to hear cheers from the stands, and to receive my diploma," senior Consuelo Miranda said. "It's truly a dream come true!"

Commencement exercises began with the introduction by the class president Renee Urstattd, and ended with the benediction by Carrie Woodly. Unlike years before, the school choir did not sing the senior song and the ceremony lasted approximately an hour.

"I've attended several graduations, but never quite like this one," former GHS teacher Joe Ramirez said. "It seemed so rushed that they even omitted some names."

While some lingered in the field others headed home to change attire for Mardi Gras Madness, the drug-free celebration put on by parents and donors of the community.

"I think that having this chemical-free party for us is really nice," senior Robin Buchhorn said. "The only bad thing is attempting to stay up till 5:30 in the morning."

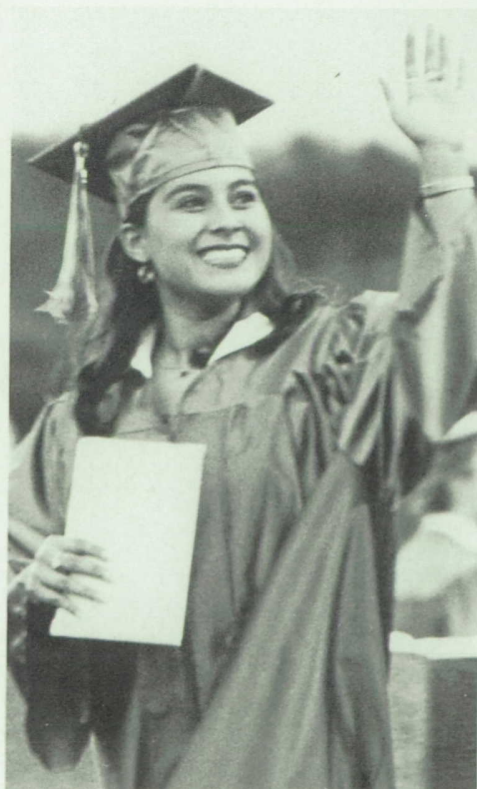

Like all good things, graduation had to come to an end, but the knowledge and friendships built with the faculty would remain close to their hearts.

"I'm going to miss my friends, but I'm especially going to miss those teachers who went out of their way for me," senior Ryan McElroy said. by Lupe Riojas

Top 6 Reasons to Get Your Picture Taken:

Your picture will be in the yearbook.

To give your grandchildren something to laugh at forty years from now.

Because you love being called "Kitten" and "Tiger" by those crazy photographers.

Your friends will have something to hang on their dartboards.

It gives you a chance to show off your new lime green leisure suit.

Proof that you went through puberty.

Fun In The Sun

On a sunny Tuesday morning, after having the senior class picture taken, some 300 seniors piled into the school buses and headed out to Reunion Ranch for a day under the sun - Senior Challenge Day.

After lining up to receive their official Senior Challenge Day name tags, the students circled up for the first event of the day: a game of "hoop the group." After several unsuccessful attempts, they passed on to other activities like "Spud." Such games filled the entire day.

"We had a lot of fun playing tarp volleyball," senior Alisa Gomez said.

Lunch time soon became one of the most looked-forward-to portions of the day.

"I was starving by the time lunch came around," senior Matt Stanley said.

As the chaperones and sponsors set out platters of pizza and fruit, the ravenous seniors crowded around, eagerly awaiting the signal to pick up their food.

After lunch ended, more activities took place, culminating in a scavenger hunt that resulted in Principal Mike Cargill's face being covered with cake.

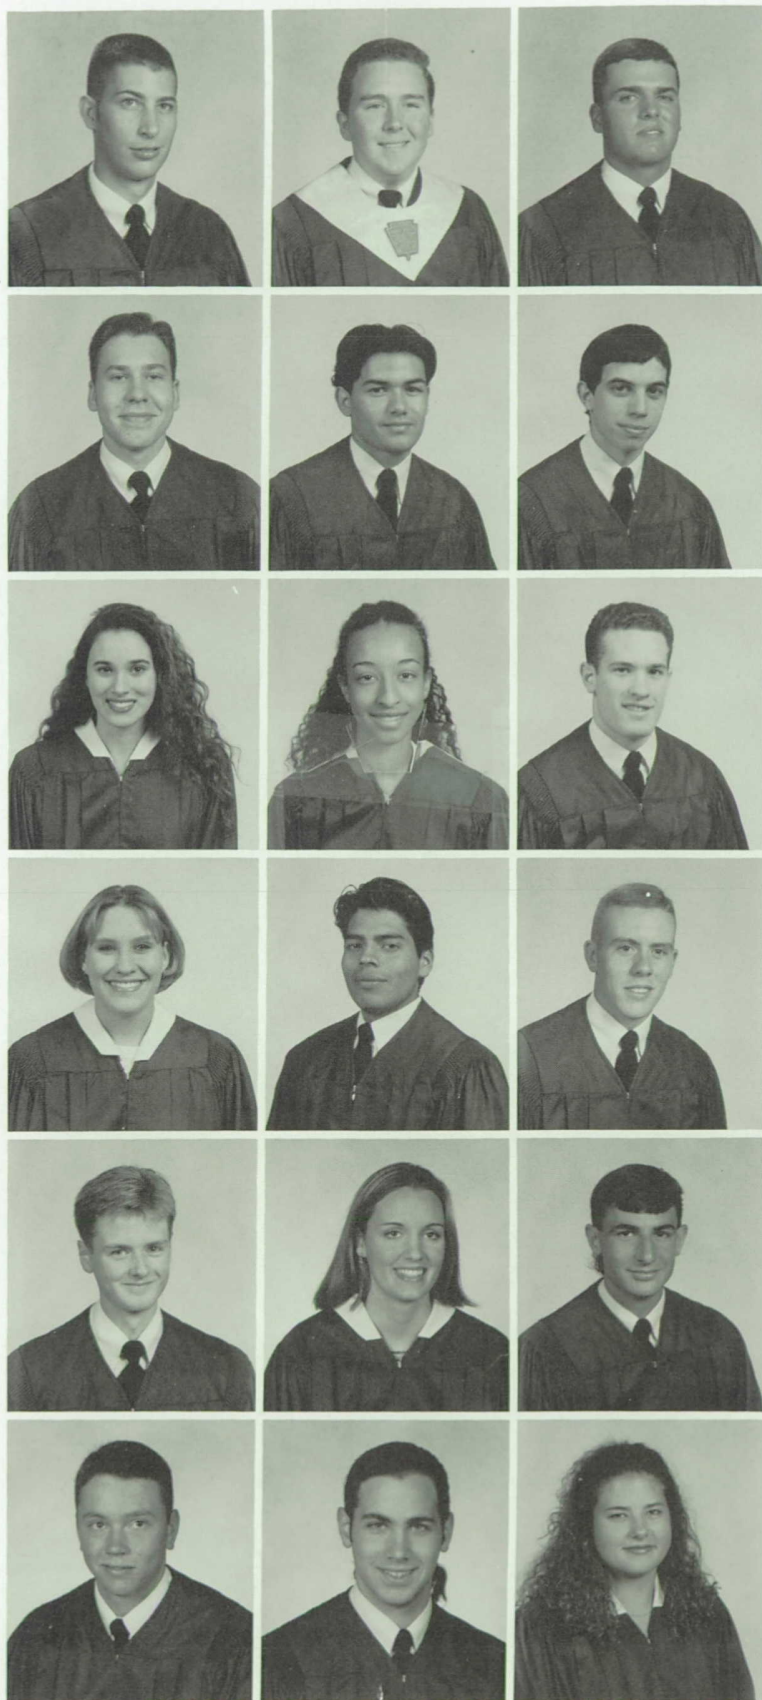

Then free time came. The seniors scattered as soon as they heard those words, and headed out towards the volleyball courts, playscape, and basketball court. Most enjoyed this time best because of the freedom that really allowed them to be with their friends.

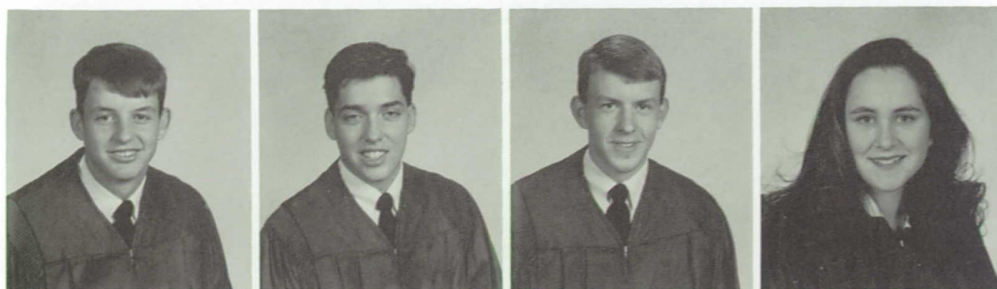

"I actually think that the whole day would have been better if it were all free time," senior John Janak said. by Russell Hogg

The College Choice

As most seniors would say, the last year of high school could get pretty hectic. In addition to preparations for college, school work, jobs, and other activities could make life quite busy.

Some of the most nerve-wrecking feelings came when college acceptance letters found their way into the mailboxes of anxious seniors. Some seniors gave off huge sighs of relief when they read these, while others were quite disappointed in the results.

After having been accepted, numerous seniors admitted that their efforts in school lessened.

"It's hard when you know where you'll be going, since the only reason you have to come to school is to get your diploma," senior Jodi Moravec said.

Most seniors looked forward to the new opportunities and experiences that college would provide them.

"I have wanted to play ball at a higher level my whole life," senior Matt Dominguez said. "The Sam Houston coaches thought I was decent and are giving me a chance to do that."

The step up from high school to college was a big highlight in the lives of seniors. They prepared themselves to go their own ways, perhaps never to see each other again. However, they knew that new experiences and friends would be found just around the corner. written by Tonya Schneider, edited by Russell Hogg

Culture Shock

While under classmen could be secure in the knowledge that they had several years to fit in, newcoming seniors had to face the fact that we had just one. Forced to leave our closest friends, we had only a short time to make new ones. Such changes were traumatic enough for under classmen; for seniors, they could be extremely hard.

"I didn't move too far from my old home, but it was still difficult at first - especially since this was my last year," senior Brian Cargill said.

For the most part, however, this proved not to be too difficult. Although we could never hope to rebuild the ties we held in our old homes, numerous friendly, outgoing local students readily warmed up to us and made us feel at home.

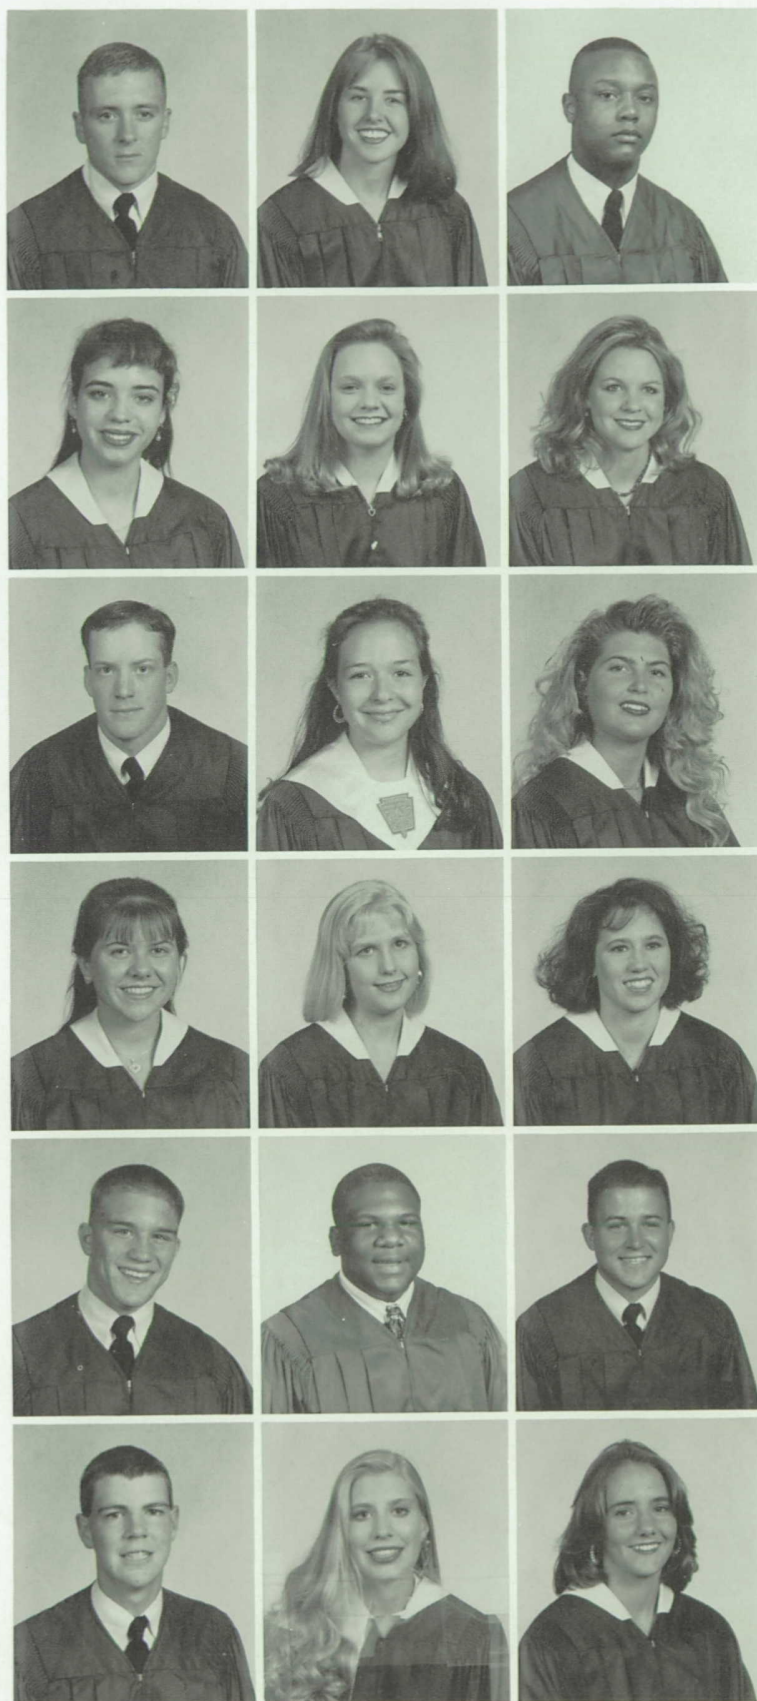

"I was apprehensive at first - really nervous," senior Jenny Martin said. "That didn't last too long, though."

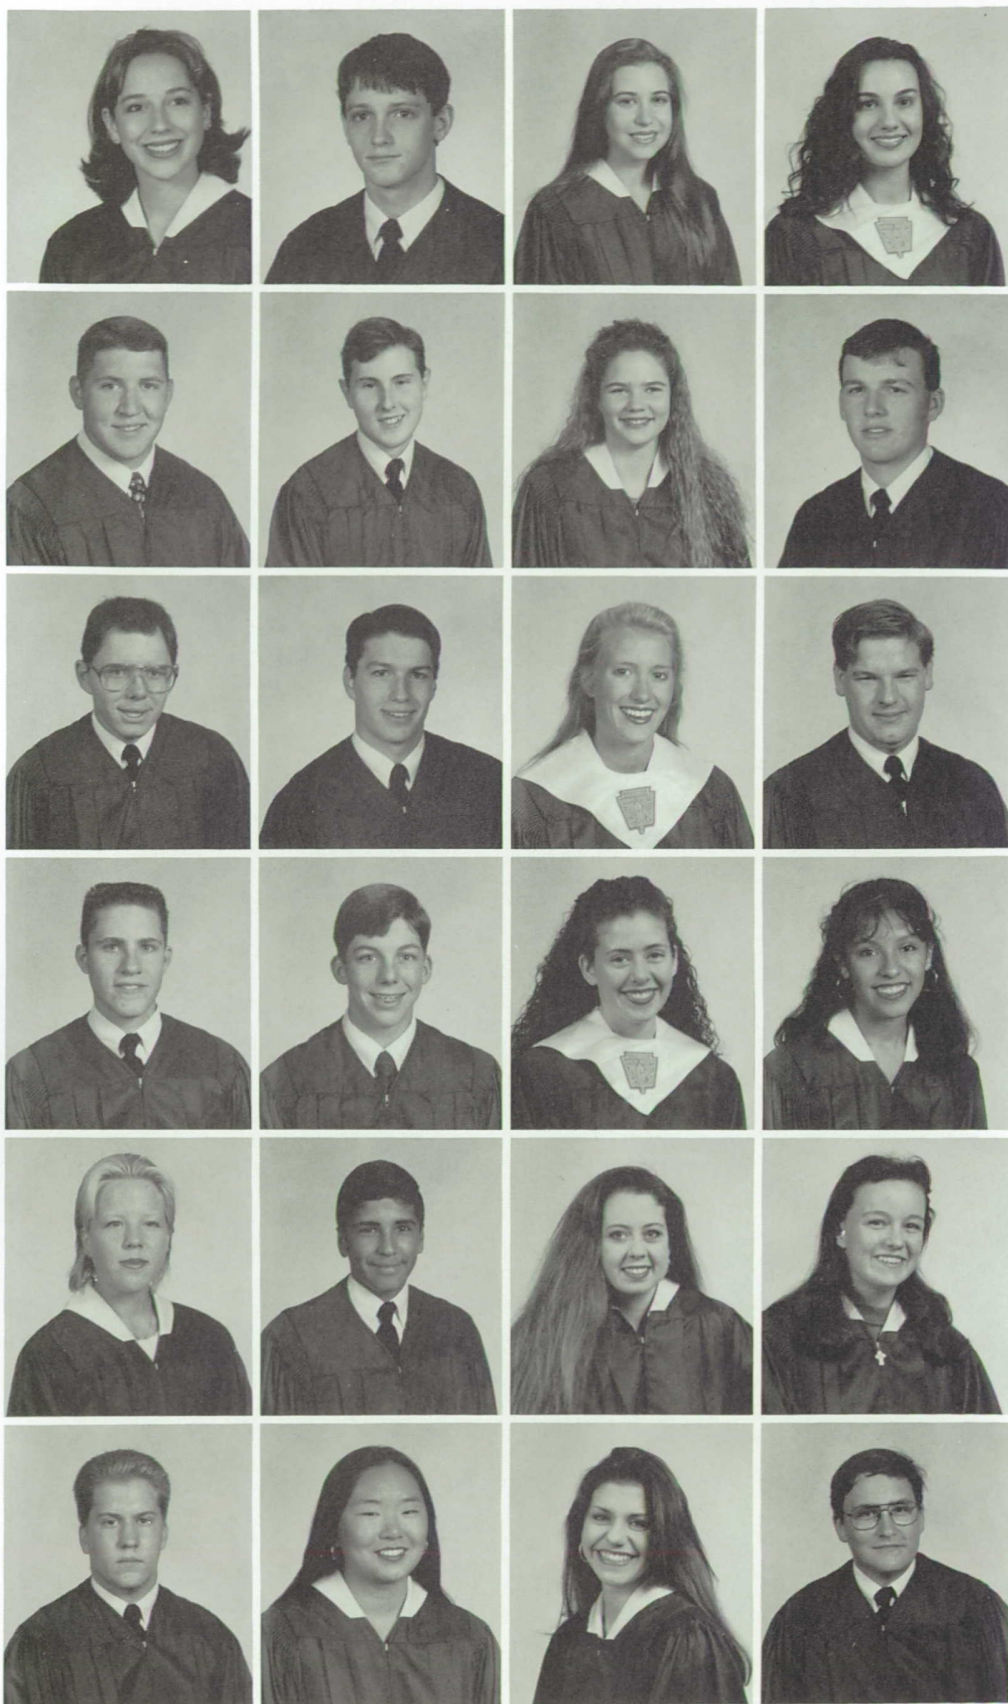

Our first, and last, year at GHS could have been quite miserable, but for the most part, it filled our heads with memorable experiences instead. By the end of the year, we were ready to walk up to the stage proudly, just as we would have done at our former home. by Russell Hogg

THE SPOILS OF WAR... In between rounds, seniors Brian Bopp and Myra Hernandez take a short break to rethink their strategies. Tactics played a major role in the game of Paintball. photo by Greg Leinweber

Splat!

As the senior year progressed, students began to search for ways to escape the building pressure of the year. Paintball wars became one of the more unusual escapes for several seniors.

Whether or not the players had a natural flair for the game, it still made for an amusing trial. Skill hardly seemed to make up for foolish decisions, however.

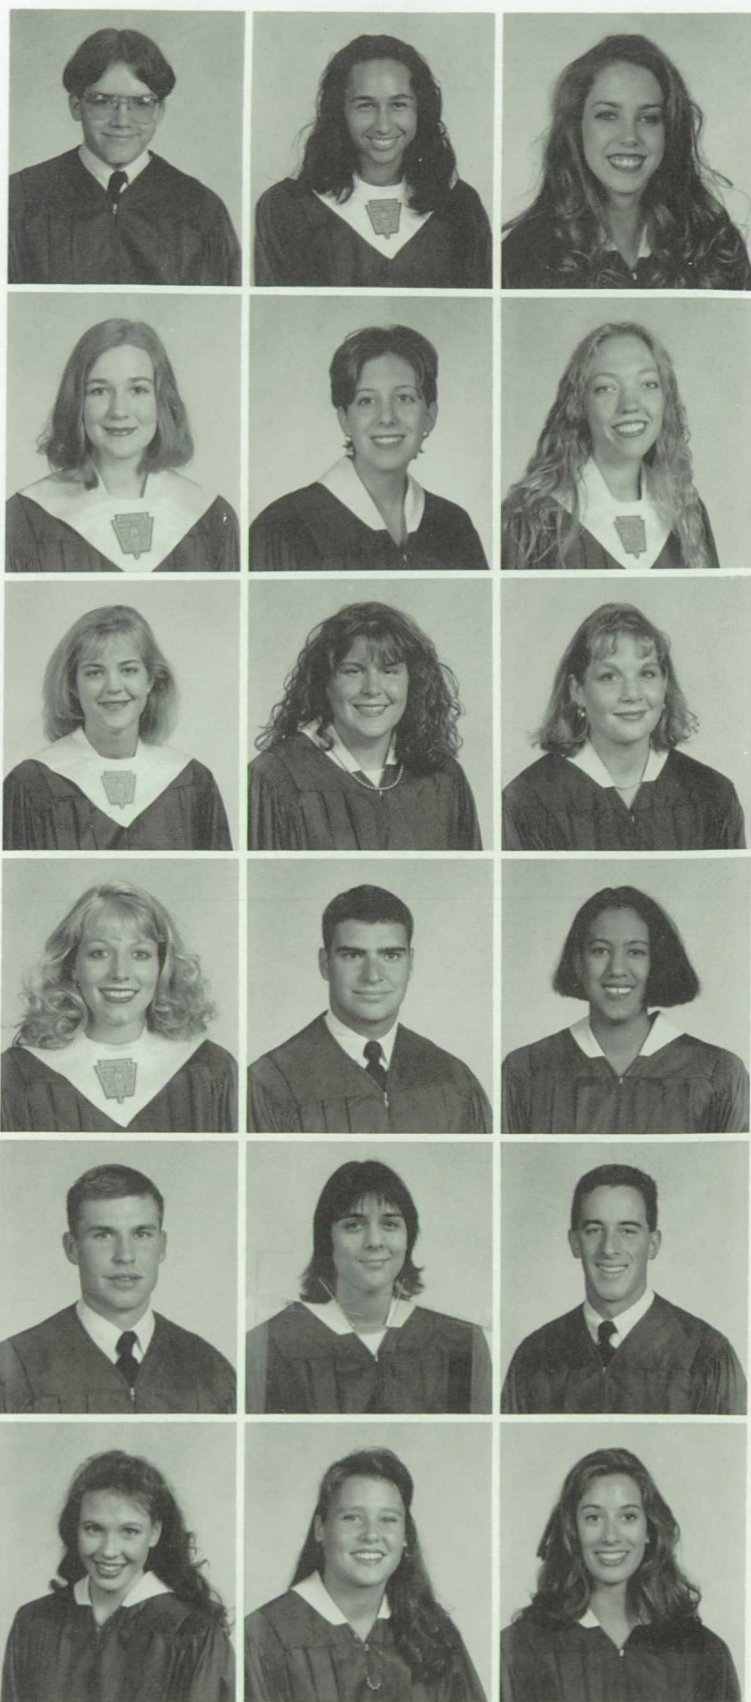

"In paintball, you're either really skilled or you get smeared with paint. Either way, it's crazy," senior Myra Hernandez said.

Just like actual combat, the players' equipment also played an important role. In not a few cases, the type of weaponry used by a player offered a major advantage.

"One pump gun versus two semis is not a very smart idea," senior Greg Leinweber said.

In spite of its popularity with players, however, most others didn't really know the game that well. As a result, quite a few held misinformed notions about the game that players constantly had to dispute.

"Paintball is great! Most people just don't understand it - that's why they don't like the whole idea," senior Joe Andrew said. by Brian Bopp

Environmental Endeavors

For three weeks in January, Susan Trostle was very trusting of her Environmental Science class. She took a step back and let the students conduct class themselves. Students drew up their own guidelines and solved three energy problems according to those guidelines. They then wrote reports that stated their solutions.

The groups had been assigned problems that simulated real-life situations. Trostle explained vague areas but would not give away any answers; research, communication, and the conclusion became the responsibilities of the students. When they drew the final conclusion, all environmental, technological, and economic factors had been considered.

"We're surrounded by tree-huggers!" junior Peyton Gray said, frustrated with a problem.

Frustration had become evident, but no one gave up. Pride and stubbornness kept the group of juniors and seniors motivated; belief that there was an answer kept them going. Worried that the answer would not be found in the allowed time did not leave their minds; fear that the final grade would

Genial Juniors

Boxers painted in bright colors gleamed at an afternoon pep rally as a group of girls stood on the floor. A handful of junior girls had gathered at Cerissa Young's house the night before.

"We all decided what we wanted to do during the week," Young said. "Then we made them the night before."

After figuring out who was what letter, the girls got down to business. While painting letters and decorations on the boxers, they caught up on each other's school and social lives.

"It gave me a chance to show my school spirit and get back in touch with my friends," junior Valerie Coronado said.

The paint dried, and they all went home, but the girls soon reunited as they spelled out "junior 96" at the pep rally.

"I can't wait until next year when we're seniors," Young said. "We have to do something really unique and outrageous." by Kelly Andreasen

In Memory of Troy Williams

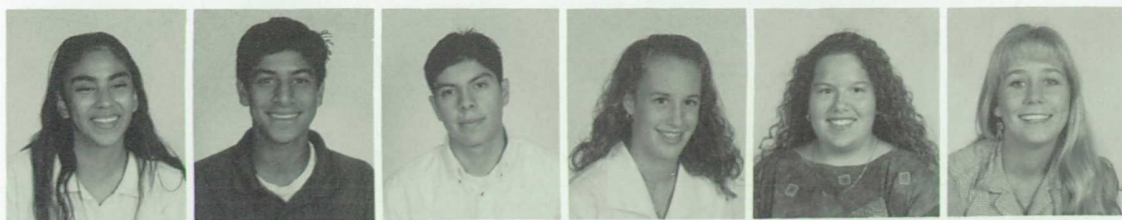

The Cost--A Great Friend

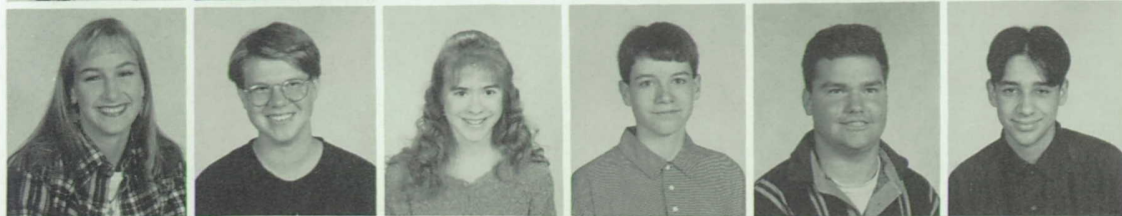

*I stood alone, yet with many people,
Looking up at that old church steeple.
Feeling gloomy with low hung head,
While a young friend, Troy, lies eternally in bed.
That old cross appeared to cry,
For it and I knew, that a true friend had died.
An outrageous battle had been fought and lost,
Leukemia's power had a great cost.
As I glanced down where Troy laid his head,
I remember words he'd once said,
'Being afraid is quite okay,
As long as you make people laugh along the way.'*

Together We'll Understand

In each day there came those times when the brain felt pushed past the limit of understanding. When those times rolled around, students came together and tried to make sense of the confusion.

"You know that saying; 'two heads are better than one' well, sometimes two, three, four heads is not just better but the only way," sophomore Amber Wood said.

Challenging classes existed as an accepted part of everyone's school day; however, they proved not impossible to accomplish with the help of teachers, parents, and friends.

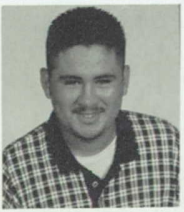

"It's hard, and sometimes I feel like I'm falling deeper and deeper," sophomore Holly Dalrymple said, "but together we'll understand." by Corrie Freisem

A Hunting We Will Go

As spring time blossomed, Biology I classes hunted for Texas wildflowers. Dusty fields and sides of streets formed their hunting grounds.

"It's amazing where you can find that perfect flower," sophomore Misty Shipman said.

The wildflower collection became a time consuming process, but teachers understood and gave enough time to put together a good project. Some students waited to the last minute and interesting molds and smells grew within the pages of the wildflower album.

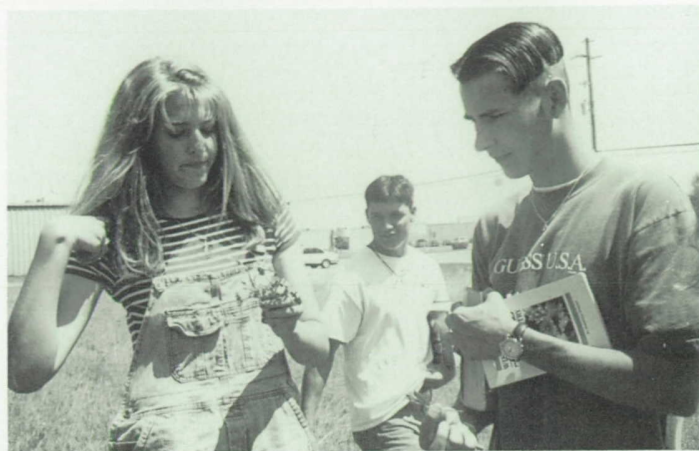

"Trying to finish, sometimes you have to put a-not-quite-dried flower in the book and just pray no one can tell the difference," sophomore Lee Lundin said.

Families banded together and picked flower after flower from the fields of Texas. Help from friends and family saved students from the task of gathering flowers all alone.

"I'll be glad when this project is over," sophomore Nick

Looking Up

Sophomores looked to upper classmen for guidance. Members of the class of '98 relied on the experience of juniors and seniors to help them in their lives.

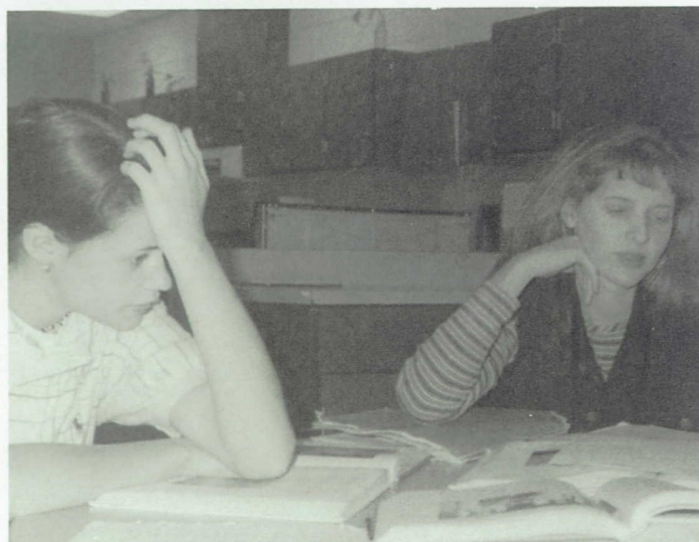

"The best advice seems to always come from my junior and senior friends," sophomore Jennifer Bohuslav said.

Sophomores thought once they made it through their freshman year that they would know it all. Yet life after the completion of their first year in high school continued to be filled with confusion.

"I thought after my freshman year I knew it all, I was wrong," sophomore Kraig Turner said.

Although some sophomores spent their lives not knowing, a large number found satisfaction with the under classmen status.

"I love being a sophomore!" Jared Stewart said. by Corrie Freisem

Sweet Sixteen

RUSH, RUSH... Walking with a quick step, sophomores Jessica Jansen and Misty Shipman hurry from parking lot to class. Licensed students at times waited until the last minute to arrive on school grounds. photo by Allyn Crain

With members of the sophomore class turning 16, they became newcomers to an unfamiliar freedom and responsibility. A Texas driver's license, and hopefully a car, finally became an attainable dream.

Drivers' education was the first step in achieving this dream. Students 15 or older could take the class before or after school, but some chose to go to an outside driving school.

"I'm going to the Austin Driving School to finish faster than at school," sophomore Danielle Hartman said.

Once they received their licenses, the world opened at their fingertips. No longer depending on their parents to chauffeur them from place to place, they became free to go where ever they wished when ever they wanted to. However, parents still thought it comforting to know their child's destination.

"I like the freedom of being able to go wherever I want without Mommy or Daddy hanging around," sophomore Jessica Schampers said.

Unfortunately, some sophomores did not possess that freedom. They still depended on rides to and from school by their parents or friends, but soon it would be their turn to experience the freedom of driving. Until that time those students had to go on dreaming of the time when they would join the driving world. by Allyn Crain, edited by Corrie Freisem

Tired Minds

Relaxed minds learned quicker than those stressed and uptight brains. In a few classes teachers provided an atmosphere of comfort and peace.

"Give me a pillow, let me lay on the floor and okay, I'll learn," sophomore Darwin Shell said.

With stressful classes as a part of all students lives, an opportunity to lay on the floor and take it easy, was appreciated by all those attempting to learn.

"I am so grateful to those teachers that understand our need to relax," sophomore Elida Resendez.

Teachers ran the risk of students drifting off, and sleeping became a constant possibility. Despite the risks some rooms came equipped with pillows, bean bags and other objects of comfort.

"It's great to have those pillows sitting there, just waiting for us to watch a movie or read," sophomore Patricia Peacher said. by Corrie Freisem

Swinging Freshmen

During first period, the tennis courts filled with freshmen. Every morning these students practiced through hot, cold, and rainy weather. Their freshman year gathered importance in beginning a high school tennis career.

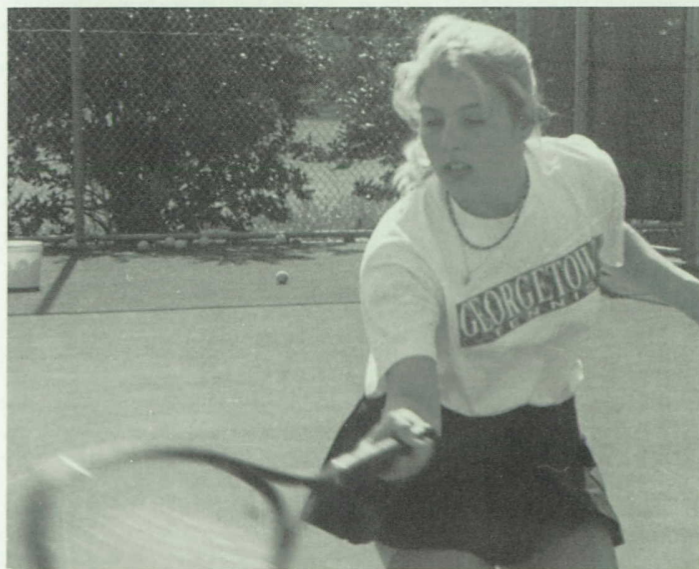

"It's fun to play singles, if you know your partner," freshman Pam Fuchik said.

In practice, boys and girls mixed and played doubles, though most preferred playing singles. Their effort proved to be worth it in the end. Freshman coach Sharon Landry kept an eye on the students while they practiced.

"Freshman Tennis is fun but a lot harder than in junior high," freshman Elizabeth Illig said.

When the final tennis practices came up, the tennis members believed themselves ready. The tennis players enjoyed leaving campus to compete in tennis tournaments. Freshman tennis players showed the skills they had perfected.

"It was challenging, but we all had a good time," freshman Pamela Pope said. by Amy Wilson and Kelsi Bashor

Self Expression

Through all the academic pressure, some freshmen still had time for the arts. Numerous freshmen enrolled in drama, choir, band and art. Freshman students learned valuable skills to aid them in their school career.

"This is a value change diagram," freshman Jessica Ables said, explaining her painting. "This shows us how the color value changes when adding white or black. I like art so much I want to make it my career."

Each of these classes allowed freshmen to learn the basic skills which they could use to express their talents and interests. Choir helped freshman students express themselves through their singing voices.

"Choir is fun, because you get to sing, and it is also a good stress reliever," freshman Derek Woodley said.

Band also allowed students to have fun. Though band was more rigorously technical and strict, many students still enjoyed their individual contributions to the whole band. Upperclassmen worked with the freshman band members to help get them prepared for their marching season.

"Band is a challenge that I enjoy, and I meet a lot of cool people in band," freshman Julie Schoppa said. "Band participates in a lot of cool activities." by Christina Crumpton

Stranded

Finding transportation throughout town became a difficult task for many underclassmen as they did not have cars and were not yet old enough to receive a license. There were few sources of entertainment for the licenseless. Some found enjoyment in a pick-up game of basketball while others waited for their older brothers, sisters, and friends to take them to a local hang-out.

"I can't wait until I get my driver's license," freshman Ryan Anderson said. "Then I can drive to the school to play ball whenever I want."

A friendly game of basketball acted as a source of entertainment for those without licenses. Freshmen had to find other activities to keep themselves occupied, that did not require driving.

"I guess it's all part of being a freshman," freshman Nicholette Lawson said. "I have to find something to do right there at home and only dream of going places."

Freshmen anxiously awaited the arrival of their sixteenth birthday. Until that time, they begged parents, bribed older siblings, and asked upper classmen for transportation to where ever they needed or wanted to go. After they turned 16 they had less limitations on where they could go and what they could do. Then a whole new world of entertainment opened up to them.

"Just imagine the possibilities, the places, the people, all the exciting things I could do," freshman Skye Compton said. "If only I could drive." by Kevin Spruill edited by Hillerie Staton and Corrie Freisem

Play Now, Learn Later

The child lying in the heart of every student cried out to be set free. A break from the tedious learning schedule became a desired need by all struggling minds, including freshman minds.

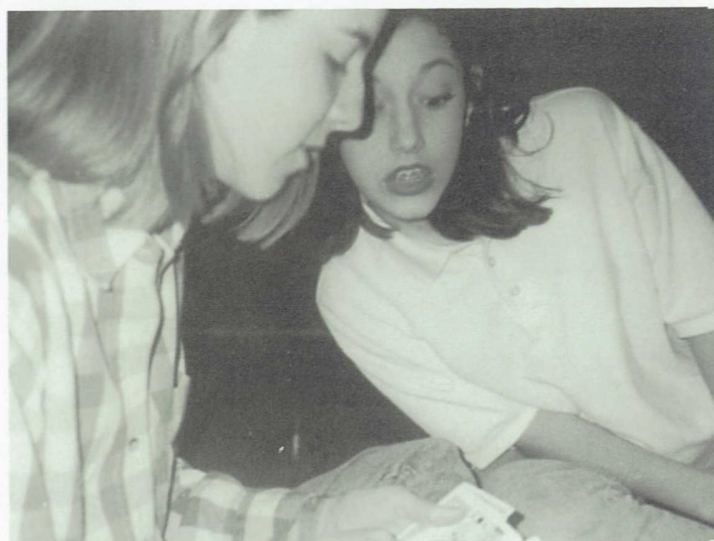

"It's nice to do something a little different once in a while," freshman Rachel Marshall said.

Hidden in the bags, pockets and purses of hopeful players resided packs of cards and other games. Before, between and, sometimes during school, students took advantage of available time to play, if they came equipped with their own personal sources of fun.

"It surprises me how many people actually carry their own cards," freshman Chad Fietz said.

Time out from thoughts of Algebra I, Physical Science, English, and World Geography given to freshmen overflowed with laughter and smiles. Card strategies and dreams of winning replaced school stresses.

"I love when we get free time!" freshman Meili Peterson said. "Sometimes I need to just laugh and play." by Corrie Freisem

Language Block

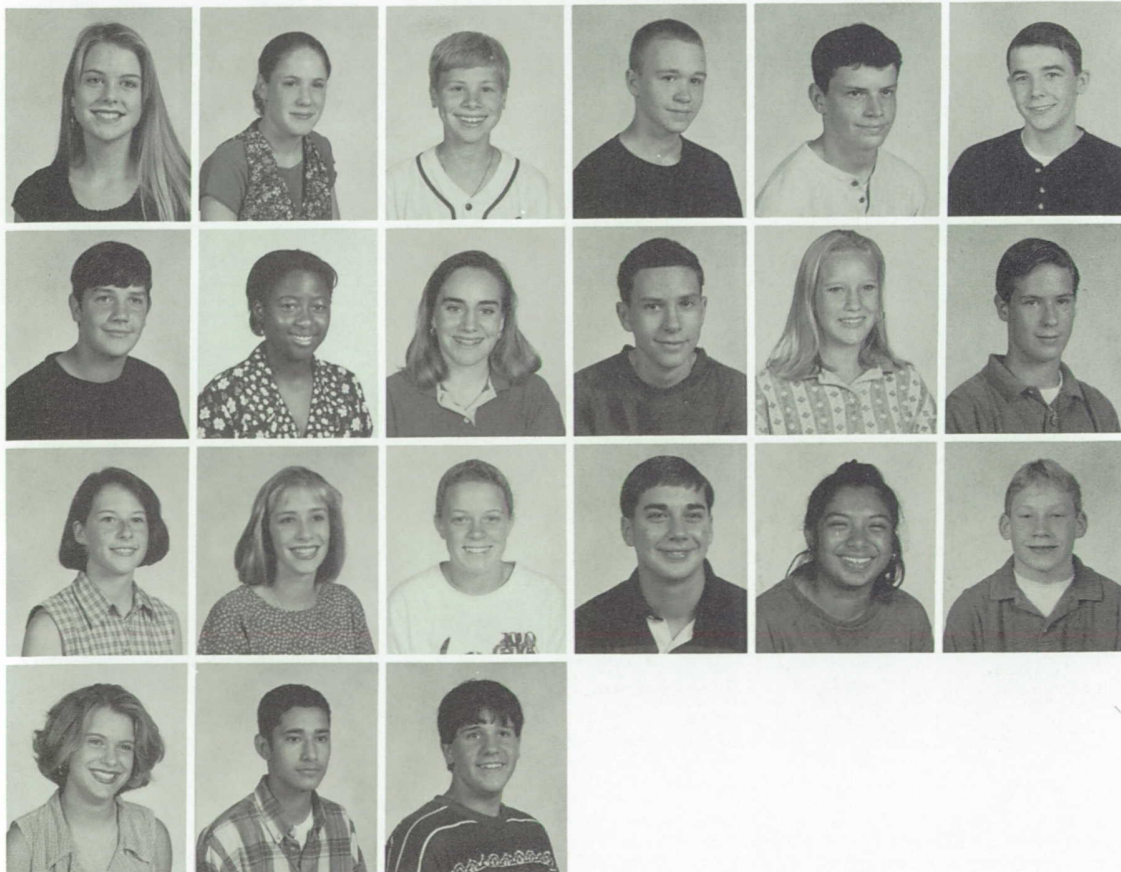

Numerous freshmen enrolled in foreign language classes that met for 90 minutes each day.

By doing this they received a whole credit each semester for their first year of foreign language and had two entire language credits by the end of the school year.

In the second year of the modified block schedule, most classes met every other day for 90 minutes, enabling freshmen and others to take a total of eight classes, four per day.

Those who passed all of their classes accumulated eight credits by the end of their freshman year. by Leah Vance

CONGRATULATIONS SON!

est son Brian. Cargill considered his first year here as principal the best year of his career. photo by Dylan Roberts

Cargill Takes Reigns

Principal Mike Cargill did not make many changes in his first year as head man. The ones he did reflected his own views on education.

For example, he moved pep rallies to the afternoon because "where as academics are important, there's more to school."

He finalized arrangements previously originated that resulted in national recognition as a Blue Ribbon school.

Starting his career in education as a band director, Cargill entered administration as a junior high assistant principal before becoming principal at Katy Junior High. Coming from Burnett High school as principal, Cargill enjoyed his first year.

"I had a wonderful first year, and luckily I made many new friends," Cargill said. "This has been the best year of my career." by Tanya Fisher, edited by Hillerie Staton

Two Teachers Find The Heart Of A Lion

When both math teacher Joy Brown and coach Joel Salyer received the news of their individual cancers early in the school year, each one focused on the positive.

Both Brown and Salyer said that since they were diagnosed they had received numerous letters, cards, calls, and hugs, some from people they did not even know.

With all this encouragement, Salyer and Brown both managed to keep up their normal day's activities in addition to medical treatment.

Up until Christmas, Salyer took radiation treatments daily for seven weeks. At the same time, he took chemotherapy treatments by IV bags and by pills. Brown, on the other hand, took radiation throughout the week of December 15, 1995. She tried to keep in good mental and physical health by riding horses almost every day.

"I can't worry about a year from now. I have to worry about now," Brown said. "There is no certificate of health."

Since being diagnosed in September 1995, Brown lost 30 pounds intentionally and she attended aerobic classes 3-4 times a week.

Brown's advice to others was to "hit it face on, and love yourself," Brown said. "Don't turn your back on God, but look to him for help."

Coach Salyer advised others in similar circumstances to "Always keep a positive state of mind, and have someone who has gone through the experience share with you." by Tanya Fisher, edited by Hillerie Staton

(Writers note: Seeing as though I have lost my mother, uncle, grandfather, and two close family friends to cancer, I can assure you when I wrote this story, I took it to heart. My good news was that my stepmother learned that chemotherapy and radiation eliminated her tumor.)

Big Players with Big Hearts

A learning experience for Eagles

As school began, temperatures soared, and football practice began full force. The Eagles had their work cut out for them because of the second year in 5A.

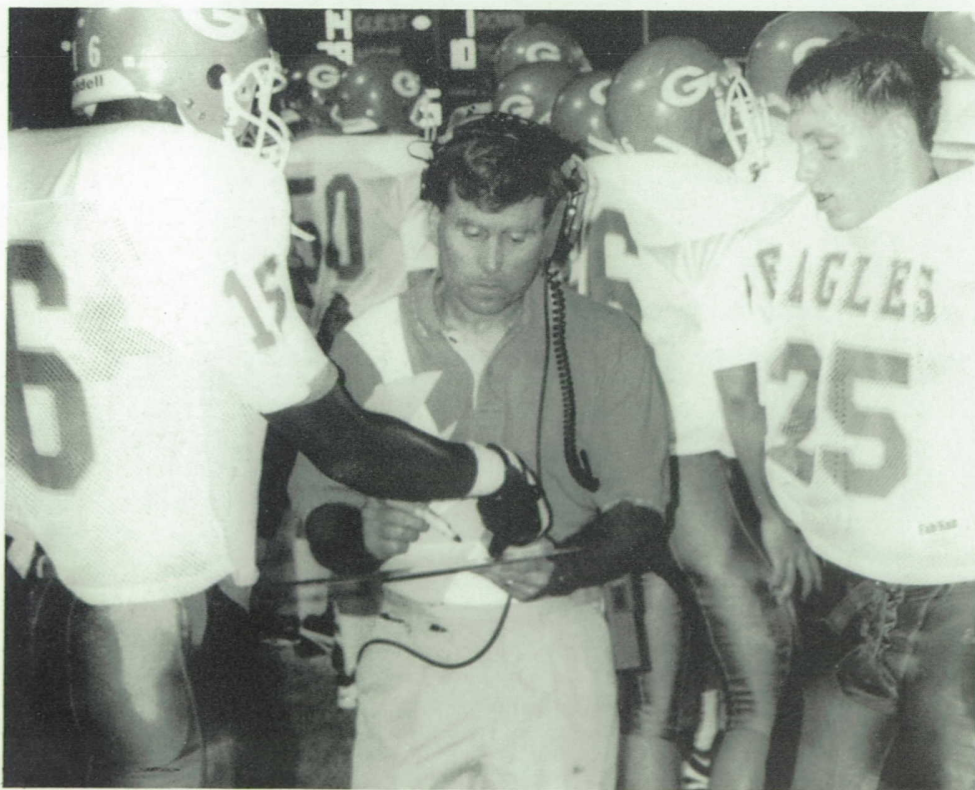

"The coaches taught us a lot about ourselves," junior Charlie Merton said. "They also taught us that football is not just a game but a way of life."

Having their offense ranked third in the district, the Eagles played with enthusiasm. They began with a 7-22 loss to the Bowie Bulldogs, and then redeemed themselves with a two week winning streak with scores of 20-9 and 19-14 against Crockett and Hays respectively.

"Although our records didn't always show it, we played hard, worked as a team, and had fun doing it," senior Chris Seaman said.

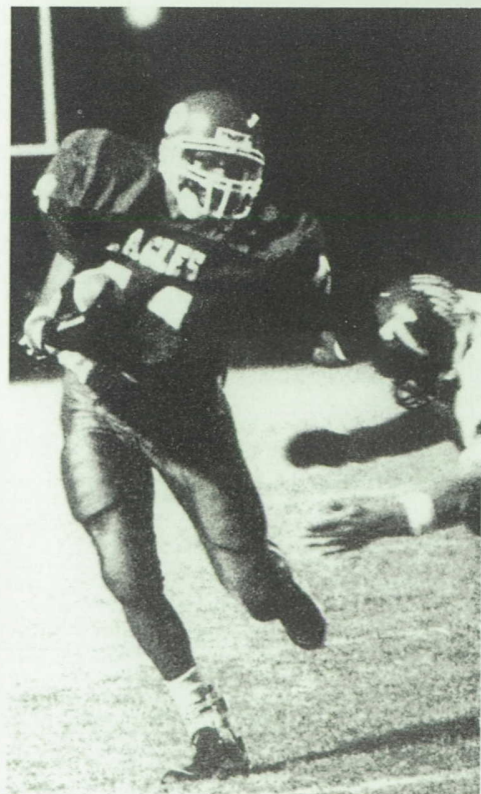

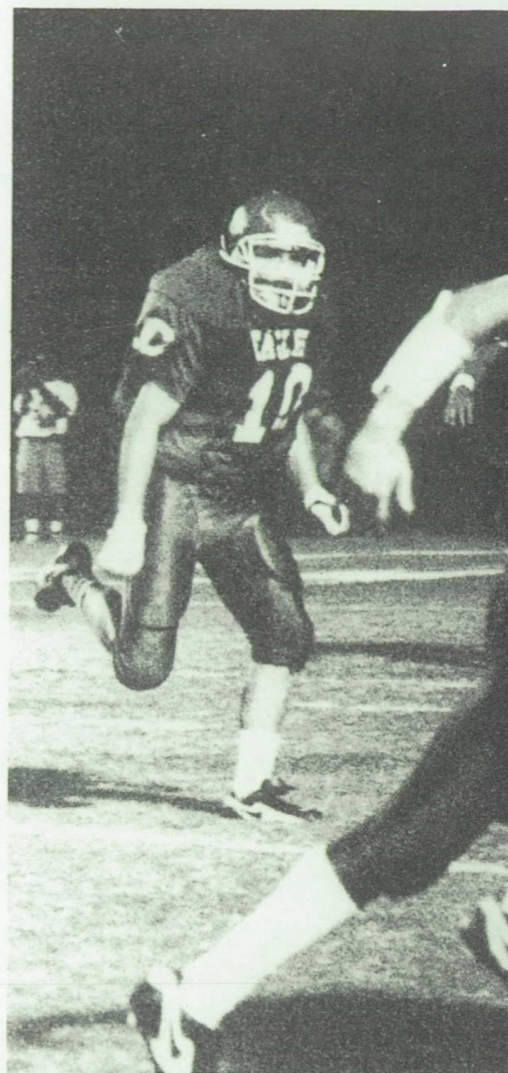

The Eagles continued to play hard throughout the season, picking up two more wins against Round Rock and Copperas Cove along the way, bringing their final record to 4-6.

"Our players have been the epitome of the term 'Eagle Fight Never Dies,' " head coach Larry Moore said. "Although it might have been easy for some of the players to write off the season towards the end, they didn't, and they fought hard the entire time." by Andrea' Smith

Where It All Begins

J.V. football prepares for Varsity

With the beginning of another year, new freshman and junior varsity football teams formed. The transition from junior high to high school football seemed natural.

"High school football isn't all that different from junior high football, but then sometimes it is completely different," sophomore Mike Ramos said.

For many freshmen, the season became a learning experience to prepare them to move up to the Varsity level.

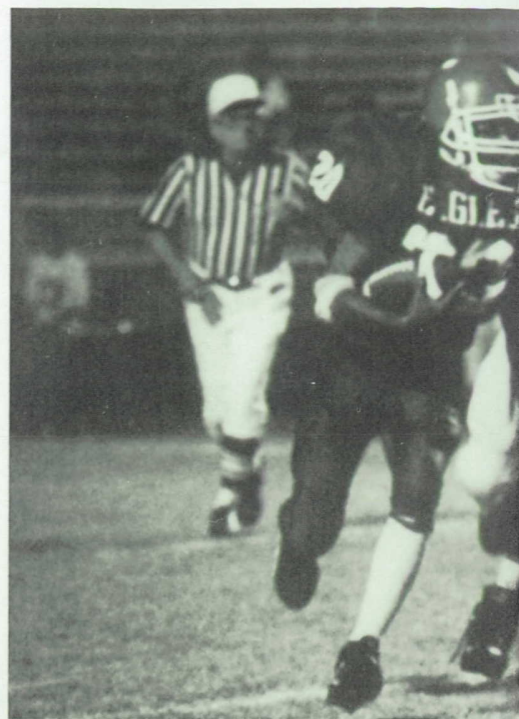

"Sometimes I wish the season would go ahead and end, since I now know what I'm doing," freshman Chad Feitz said. "Then I could have a chance to move up to JV or maybe even Varsity."

The players put in long exhausting hours lifting weights, perfecting plays, and doing various running drills before and during the fall season. The results of the hard work were the glorious moments when it all came together.

"It is a lot of practice and pain," freshman Buell French said. "But the times when everything clicks makes it all worth it!"

Showin' Their Stuff

There is no "I" in teamwork

While most enjoyed spending time sleeping and swimming, the Lady Eagle volleyball team began strenuous practices in August. A determined team carried dreams of returning to the playoffs.

"If we stay focused during the season, we can go far," junior Cari Lynn Stridde said. "I hope we come out on top."

The Lady Eagles had their rivals. Westwood and Round Rock proved to be the team's two biggest competitors.

In order to accomplish their goals, the team had to work together. All of the hard work paid off when the Lady Eagles captured the District title.

"We are a very close team," senior

Jodi Moravec said. "This has allowed us to work together better."

The Varsity's season came to an abrupt end when Cypress Fairbanks defeated them in two straight games during the playoffs. The final outcome was a Bi-district title for the Lady Eagles.

The junior varsity team finished third in district and compiled a 21-6 record. The freshman "blue" team placed fourth in district with a 12-6 season record, while the freshman "white" team had a 13-6 record.

"All for one and one for all," coach Paty Esparza said. "That describes the kind of team we are." by Leah Vance and Allison Enke

Taking the Plunge

Swim team gets an overhaul

Encouraged by a new coach, the swim team placed second at District and advanced 11 swimmers to Regionals.

Seniors John Janak, Nicole LeCompte, James Wade, Nisse Perkins, juniors Celeste Alexander, Kelly Andreasen, Daniella DelCastillo, Alison West, Devonee LeCompte, sophomores Jesse Leiker, David Sanchez, Scott Matthews, and freshman Aleia McCord showed strong performances in San Antonio.

Janak and the 200 free relay team finaled and hoped to continue to the State meet.

"I was excited when our relay finaled," West said. "We were ranked third going into prelims."

Practicing in the afternoon and swimming indoors, swimmers welcomed the change because it allowed them to work harder in the winter months.

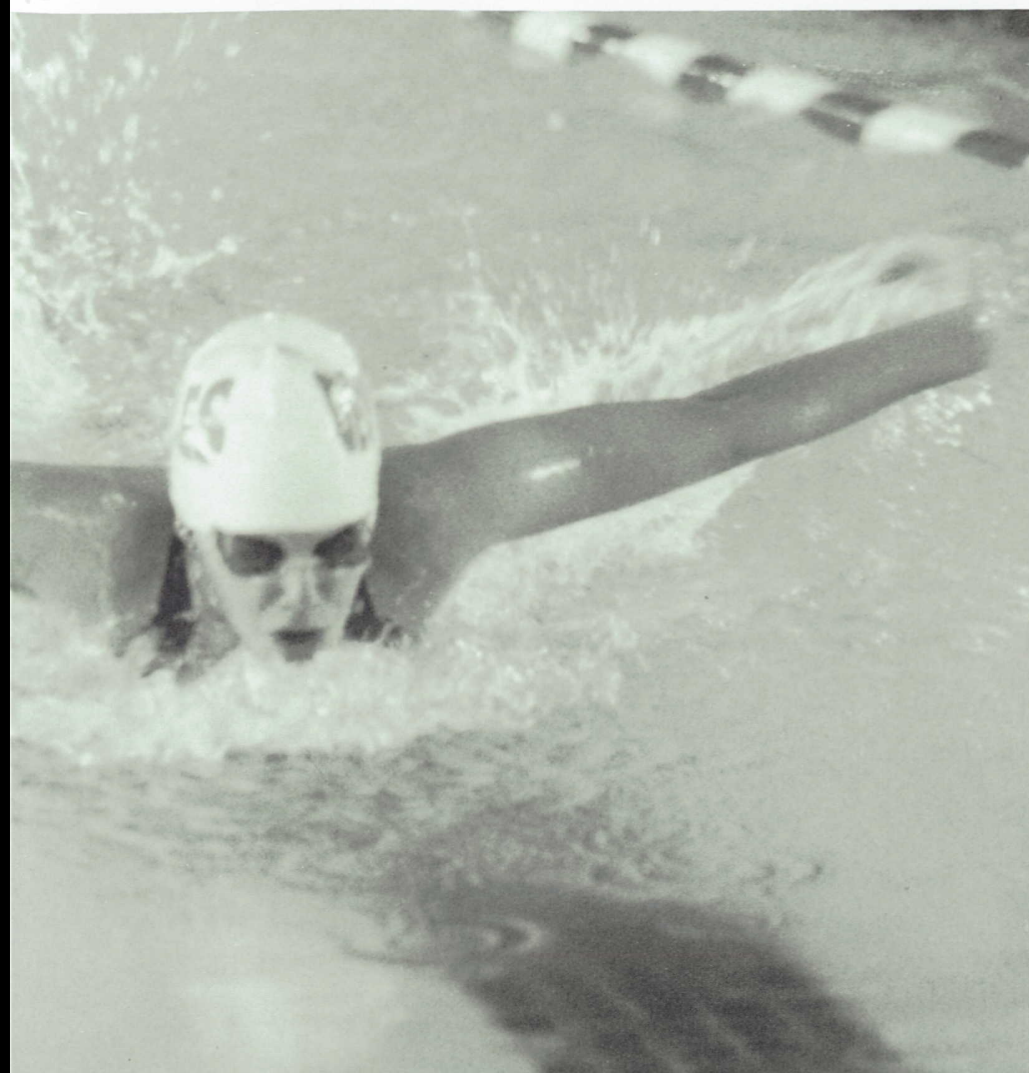

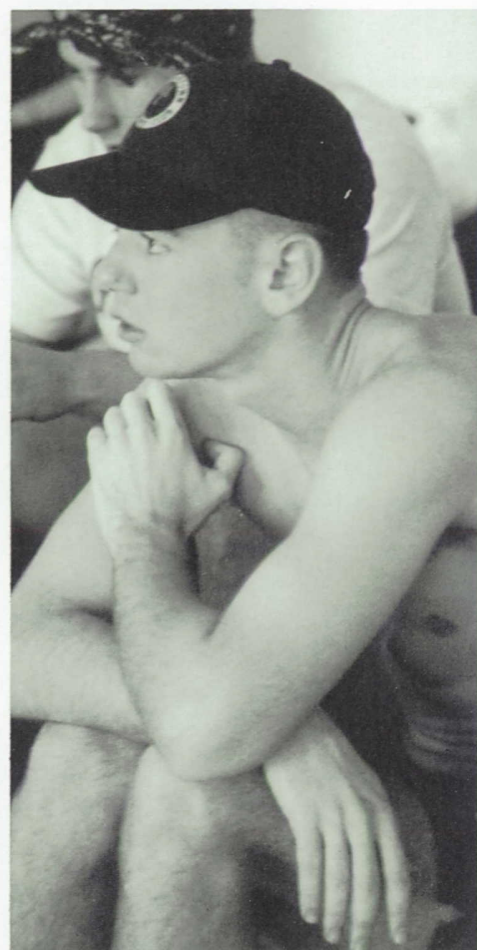

"Southwestern University has been generous in allowing us to use their facilities this year," LeCompte said. "We are glad we are not stuck swimming outside."

Throughout the year, expectations held high as swimming times steadily improved and showed strong standings at meets during the season.

Run Eagles Run

Cross Country goes the extra mile

With the sky still dark at 6:30 a.m., the girls and boys Cross Country teams made their way through the steep hills of the Southwestern University course. Motivation from both coaches drove them to practice each morning.

"Determination gets the job done," junior Tunetha Wren said.

The boys team consisted of no seniors, yet they were experienced runners. The girls team carried mostly seniors along with talented underclassmen. Each team shared the same goal of returning to the State meet in November.

"Personally, I believe my running has improved since last season," junior Veronica Hernandez said.

At the District meet, the Lady Eagles captured a second place win while Round Rock grasped the District title. The Eagle Varsity team proved its abilities by winning District. The boys Junior Varsity team achieved a third place trophy while the freshmen earned a first place victory.

"I think we did very well at District for being such a young team," sophomore Thomas Simmons said.

Both teams qualified for the Regional meet in Arlington. At Vandergriff Park, the course proved to be challenging as the competitors ran their hardest. When all was said and done, junior Kaci Saenz had qualified for the State meet, and the girls team had placed fourth, coming one runner short from going to State.

"The guys did a good job at Regionals," Coach Mark Townsend said. "They were just outrun by their competition."

Saenz returned to the State meet for the third year in a row and placed twelfth overall at the Southwestern course. Both coaches were content with the outcome.

"I was really pleased with the girls' effort this season," Coach Kellye Richardson said. "I am also excited because most of the top runners will return next season." by Allison Enke

Making Matches

Tennis takes it in tournaments

Forehand, backhand, overhand, whatever it took, the Eagles gave. In a hot season of tough tournaments, players hit hard strokes opponents could not move quick enough to recover.

The fall season focused on doubles matches while the spring rotated to singles. Eagles participated in both, but a few preferred one to another.

"Each way has its advantages; in singles there is more court to cover, while in doubles it requires good team work and communication," junior Alisa Cook said. "Doubles just tends to be more fun to me."

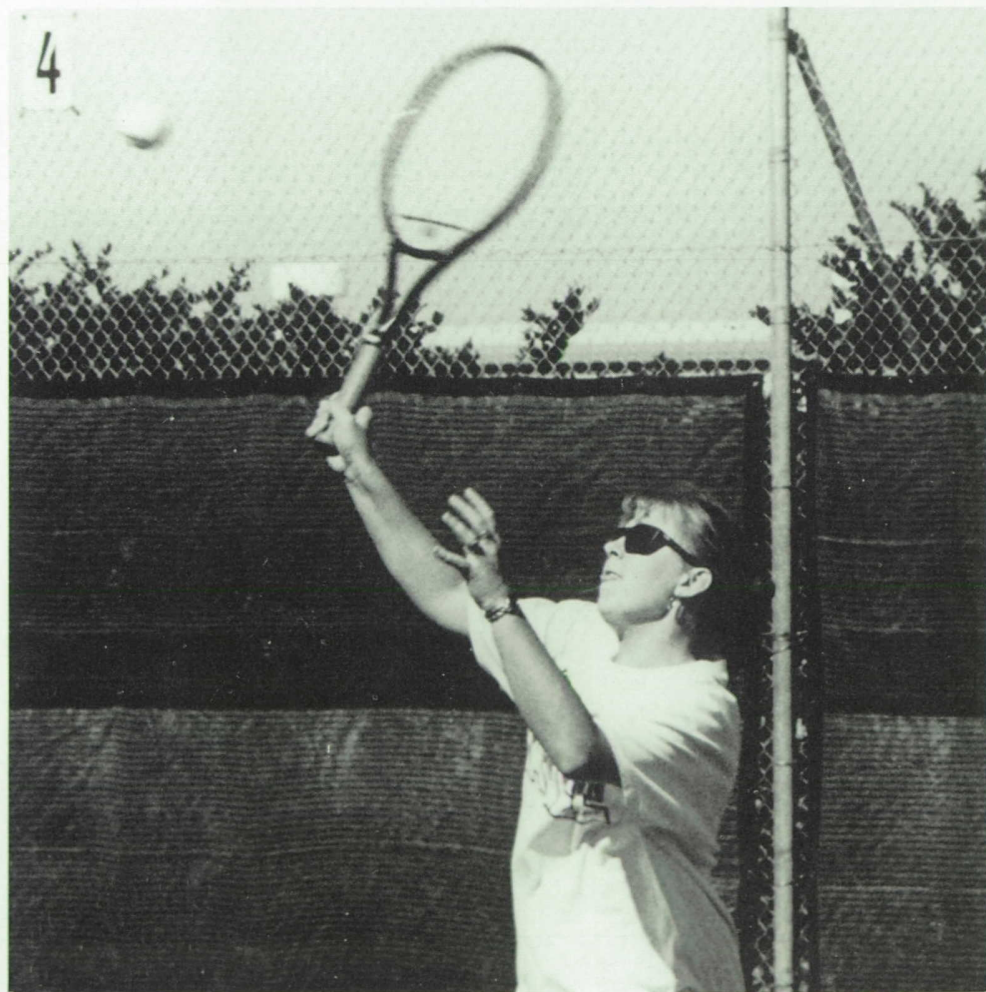

To win in either situation, the Eagles endured long, strenuous hours on the court doing various drills to prepare them for matches.

"No matter how well you play, there is always someone better, so you cannot slack off," senior Scott Doerfler said.

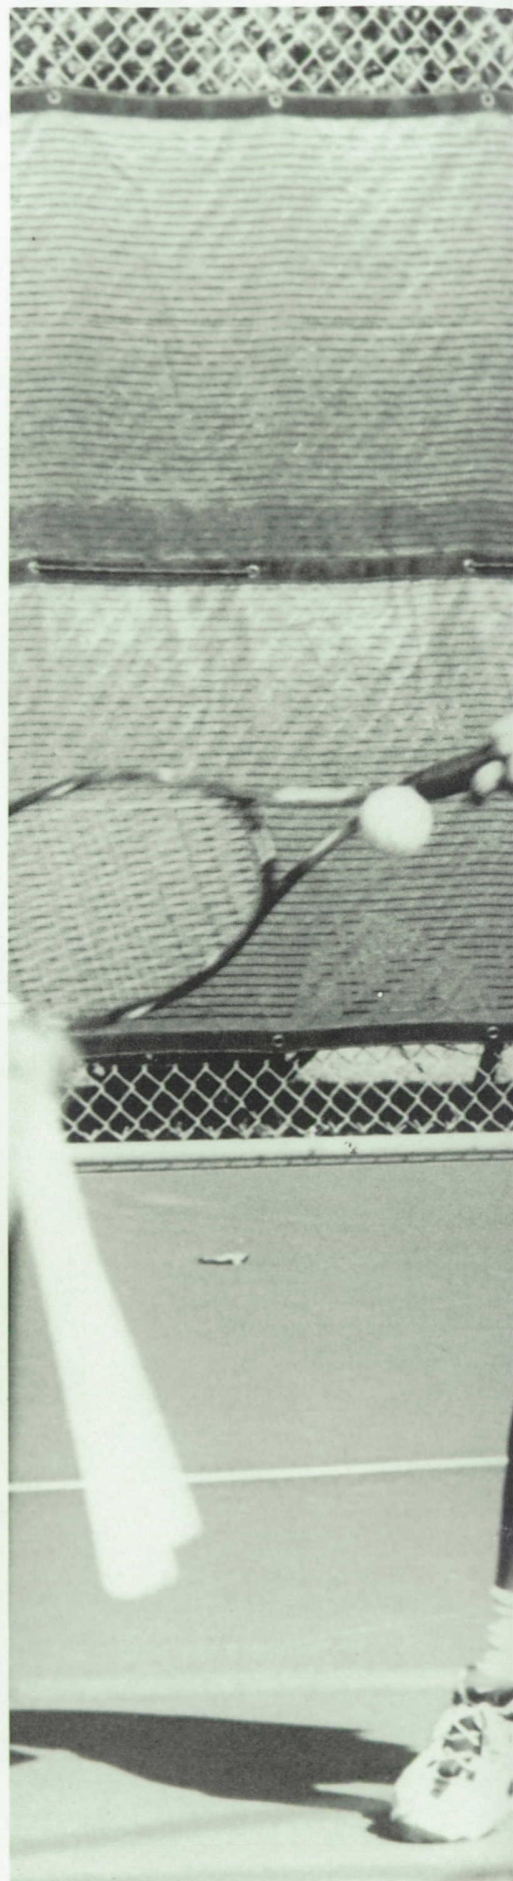

Tennis, as a whole, experienced great accomplishments. For the Lady Eagles senior Robyn Bassett qualified for Regionals, while senior Scott Doerfler and junior Chris Clayman progressed to State in the guy's singles. Experience contributed to the team's success.

"We are losing many good seniors this year that will be missed," junior Tiffany Holmstrom said. "Fortunately, the girls have some talented players coming up from junior high next year." by Joel Darling

Hoopng With Heart

The game of basketball at its best

With courage, a fixed purpose, and above all, heart, the Eagle basketball teams showed that they would not take the title of underdogs.

Coming into the season the guys kept their eyes on the goal and concentrated on the game. Enduring late night practices, players worked as a team to clench a position in District that would put them in the Bi-District playoffs.

"We wanted to prove we could do it, but sometimes even I was not so sure we could," sophomore Dustin Dvorak said.

Some things changed with the new year, but nothing that would take away from the spirit of basketball. Annual traditions, including the chili supper and cake auction, continued in order to raise money for new warm-ups.

"You always gotta look good," junior Thomas Winkler said.

A new attitude mixed with old skill ran on to the court to produce a phenomanal game. The Eagles flew by with Jordan jump-shots and Globetrotter passes.

"I think we amazed ourselves a few times," junior Austin Skaggs said. "We formed an outstanding team."

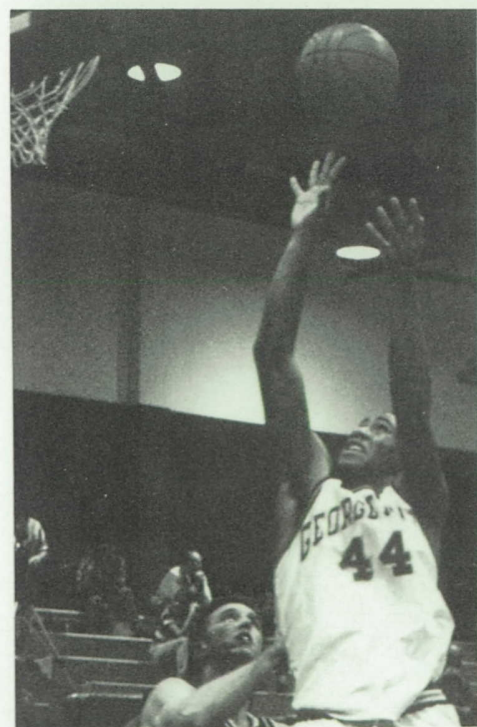

Shot after shot, the Varsity Eagles scored their way to the Bi-District game by placing second in District. They did not slow down until they faced the Longview Lobos, and even then they could not be stopped.

"We played a hard game," senior Tanner Wuthrich said. "Unfortunately, the Lobos played a little better."

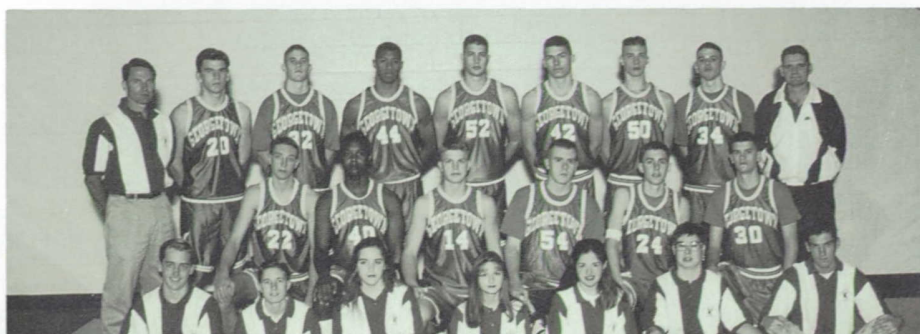

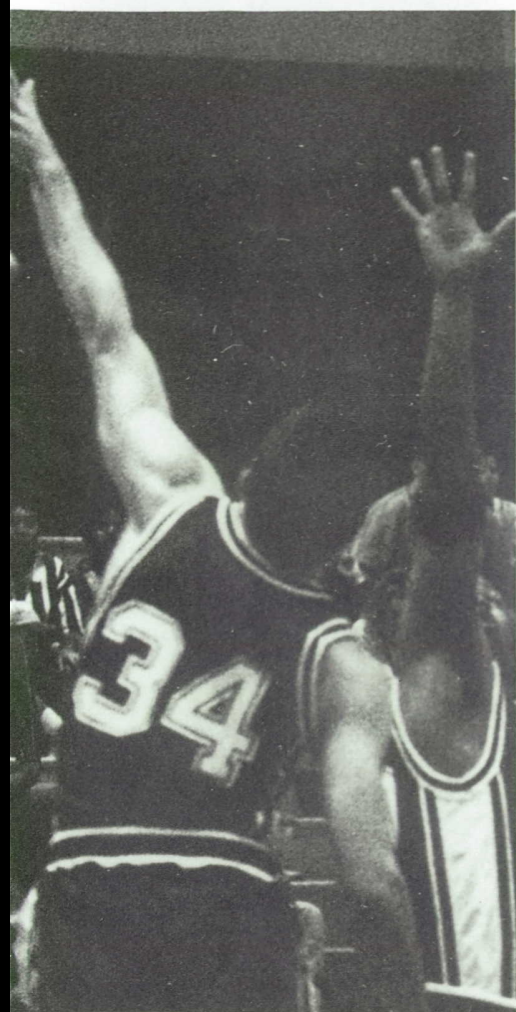

When spring came, a memorable basketball season had ended. The Varsity concluded with a season record of 23-9 and a District record of 10-4.

The JV finished with a 15-14 record, while the Freshman A compiled a 17-12 record and the Freshman B a 9-11 record.

The Tie That Binds

Lady Eagles go for the goal

With leadership from upperclassmen and exhibition of heart, the Lady Eagles began the season in one of the toughest districts and regions in the state. Expectations among the teams, coaches, and fans stood high.

"I think we will have a very successful season," sophomore Rhonda Ooten said. "The team is working hard and getting strong."

As practices started in late October, head coach Rhonda Farney and her coaching staff concentrated on getting the team into excellent shape by running and lifting weights.

"We have some great athletes in the program," Farney said. "Some of our kids came from cross country and volleyball so it was an easy transition for them."

During the early season, the team steadily improved by winning the Georgetown Thanksgiving and Lindale Hoop Heaven Tournaments.

Next, the Lady Eagles traveled to the Arlington Classic where they were defeated by Duncanville 60-63 in the semi-finals but went on to place third overall in the tournament.

District 14-5A provided competition from both Temple and Round Rock. The Lady Eagles began District play at Temple, before a standing room only crowd, and managed to escape with a 52-50 victory. Ending the two year winning streak of 28-0 in District 14-5A, the Lady Eagles then began to surge through the playoffs.

"We are very excited about being in the playoffs," senior April Brinkmeyer said. "Our goal is to make it to State!"

With a great Regional championship win over Carrollton Newman Smith 51-46, the team had landed itself in the State tournament for the third time this decade. In the game before State, the Lady Eagles suffered their third and final loss of the season to Alief Elsik.

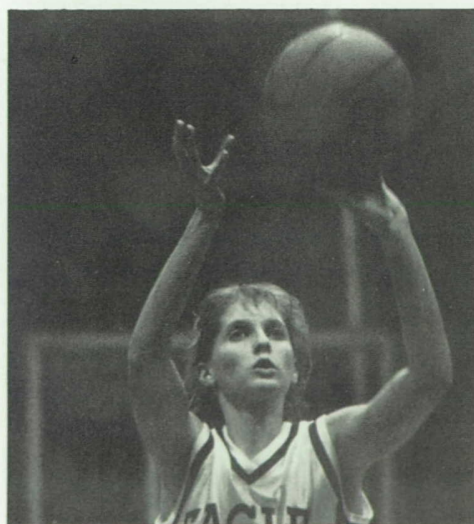

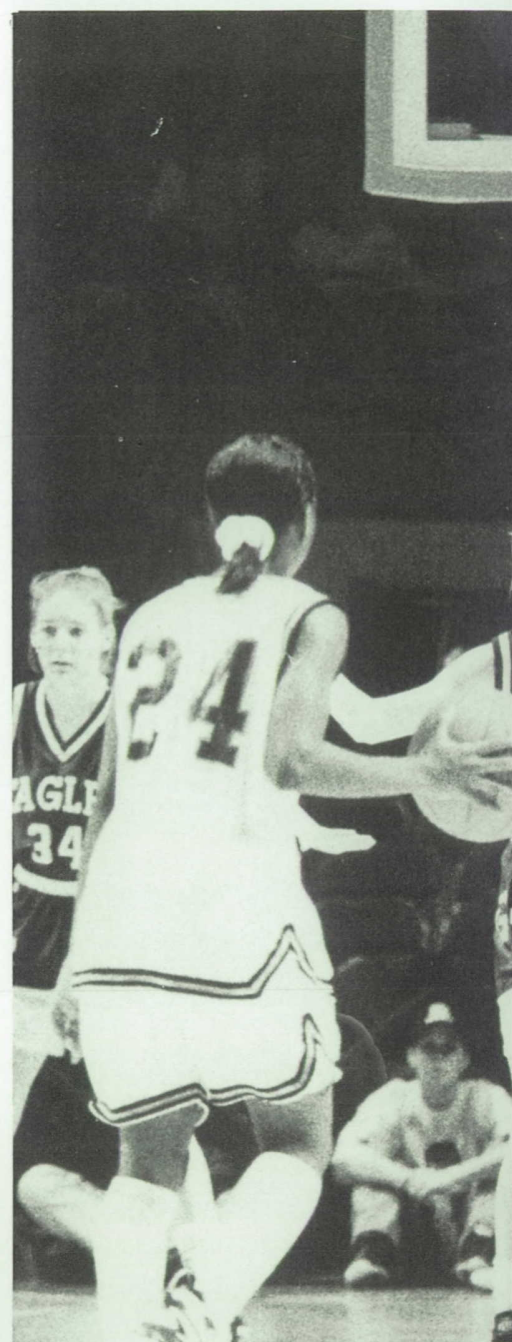

"Our last game was very disappointing, but it didn't take away the success from the rest of the year," senior Natalie Tucker said.

The junior varsity finished the season with a 24-4 record and a District championship, while the freshman ended with a 22-6 record tying for first in District.

Just Kickin' It

Soccer boys sweep season

Kicking, clawing, head-butting, and "cleating", the boys' soccer teams battled throughout the spring season.

Individually, the teams' talent proved to be great. Numerous players played soccer not only for the school, but also for clubs. Coming together to adapt as a team did not concern the players.

"We have an incredibly talented group," junior Jeremy Crawley said. "Joining as a team was not a problem."

Injuries occurred often in this aggressive sport. At times, players sprained ankles, pulled muscles, and injured their knees.

The strategy and skill one had to possess in order to play attracted players to the game.

"Soccer is very challenging," senior Devin Rose said. "It involves determination and self discipline."

Though training was tough, the players knew what it took to compose a team of unshakeable strength.

"The key to a successful season is to balance the talent we have out on the field," senior Ted Peterson said.

In January, the Varsity team played 15 games in 30 days to prepare for the demanding season. With a District Championship title, the Varsity competed in a shoot-off but lost, ending their season.

At the same time, the JV, JV B, and freshman teams finished with 15-3-1, 1-4, and 16-2 records for the year. by Bernadette Hinojosa and Joel Darling

Girls soccer reaches Area playoffs

At the beginning of January, the girls soccer teams began practices in preparation for the 1996 season. A well-rounded team came together to play with a positive attitude. For most players, soccer practice served as a getaway.

"Soccer is a sport where I can take out my anger on other people," junior Jessica Riedel said. "The harder I play, the better I feel."

District 14-5A included tough competition from both Killeen and Temple. The Lady Eagles worked hard during practice, mainly concentrating on scoring drills, in order to do well in District play.

The girls proved themselves by winning third place in their District. In the Bi-District game, they came out on top once again by defeating Belton 6-1. Their season came to an end when Kilgore defeated them 1-2 in the Area playoffs.

"Anytime you go to playoffs you have to have some measure of success," coach Butch Spruill said. "We didn't play as well as we were capable of."

The junior varsity completed the season with a 12-0-5 record, setting a new school record for the total number of ties during a season. As District champions, the girls managed to accomplish most of their goals.

"For a team of mostly freshman, we worked really well together," junior Sari Peterson said. "Overall, we had an awesome season!" by Allison Enke

Getting on Track

Eagle teams stride to success

As the school year progressed, spring eventually arrived, bringing the sport of track with it. The Eagle and Lady Eagle track teams practiced and trained constantly in preparation for a brand new season. The goal in mind; to win the District meet, and advance to Regionals and go on to State.

"There is no better feeling than to receive a gold medal," sophomore Ryan Joseph said.

With strength and a competitive spirit, the boys competed in various events from the 1600m run to the pole vault. Seniors Kevin Sims, Travis Raley, Justin Russell, and junior Zach Otto made up the 400m relay team. Each athlete possessed a different perspective when it came to the most entertaining event of the meet.

"The 400m relay is definitely the most exciting event," Sims said. "The last 100m of the race usually decides who will win the race."

At the District meet in Killeen, the junior varsity and freshman teams placed fifth and sixth, while the Varsity placed eighth overall. Individually, two athletes qualified for the Regional meet. Sophomore Brandon Menking placed second at District with a twelfth place finish in the 800m, while junior Scott Necessary placed third in District in the event of shot put. By placing third, Necessary became the alternate for Regionals.

"The leadership from this years' seniors led the Eagles to a successful season," Coach Richard Johnston said.

Along with the boys, the girls strived to do their best at each track meet. The 3200m relay team of senior Cate Locke, junior Kaci Saenz, and sophomores Rhonda Ooten and Jennifer Whatley competed in the Texas Relays and placed second overall.

"The workouts are tiresome, but it pays off when you win an event," sophomore Amanda Hockey said.

At the District meet, the Lady Eagles placed fifth overall. Saenz, who went to State in cross country, advanced to Regionals in the 1600m and 3200m events and ended up winning the 3200m run. This victory qualified Saenz for State. At the State meet, Saenz ran one of her best times and placed second.

"We will lose seven good senior leaders this year, but the classes coming up will be very competitive in our new District," Coach Jill Warren said. by Justin Mosley edited by Leah Vance

All Or None

Baseball bats way to playoffs

The Eagles had their ups and downs in district 14-5A. Tough competitors included Round Rock, Waco, Temple, and Copperas Cove.

With wins against Temple and Killeen, the undefeated team went on to face Round Rock, but came up short.

"We have to play as a team in order to beat the Dragons," senior Chris Seaman said. "We cannot make any errors."

Working as a team did not pose a problem for most of the year. The theme "all of us or none of us" on t-shirts held true as members put out their personal best for the team.

"Matt Hurtado, Adam Foster, and Richard Lundin did an especially good job for us," senior Toby Anderson said.

Winning against Waco, the Eagles

bounced back, but suffered a loss to Westwood.

A new head coach, Clayton Hill, meant minor adaptations for the team. The team welcomed the changes and adjusted easily.

"He is a good discipline coach who knows the game of baseball," senior Brian Jones said.

Coach Hill helped lead the Eagles to seven straight victories and enter the playoffs in third place.

One of the most memorable seasons in the Eagles history ended with a loss to Klein Oak.

"The game was taken from the Varsity," junior Brent Roberts said. "But they at least scared their opponents a little." by Joel Darling and Greg Mitchell

Fourth in District

Swinging It Home Softball team puts focus on unity

Team unity and leadership was decided on among the Lady Eagles as they prepared for the season ahead. With four of last season's stars graduated, the team looked to some unexpected leaders to come forward.

"It's hard to fill those players' shoes because they are people we have looked up to for three years," senior Jennifer Young said. "As seniors, Michelle Rogers and I will just have to do our best to provide the team with as good of leadership as they did."

With a new junior varsity coach, Coach Jodee Wilson, and a new Varsity assistant, Coach Paty Esparza, the Lady Eagles strived to perfect their defense and hitting fundamentals during practice.

"The girls have upped their competitive level this year," Coach Tarryl Hyder said. "They have improved fundamentally since last season."

As the season progressed, a couple of players became ineligible because of grades, putting more responsibility on sophomore pitcher Erin Negron. In the game against Killeen Ellison, Negron pitched a no-hitter, and the Lady Eagles won 10-0.

"It was a great game," Negron said. "I was focused and concentrated, and everything seemed to fall into place."

The girls placed second in the Georgetown Tournament and earned the consolation trophy at the Temple Tournament. With a season record of 16-13 and 9-5 in District, they managed to place fourth in District.

The junior varsity ended its season with a third place finish in District and a 6-1-5 season record.

"The JV team had a tremendous season," Coach Wilson said. "They adjusted well to me, since this was my first year of coaching." by Becky Ochs, Nicole Segal edited by Allison Enke

Going Clubbing

Gifted golfers putt to perfection

Hole after hole, determined young golfers aimed to achieve low scores on the golf course. Onlookers thought golfers had it easy, but the team only made it look that way.

"The teams worked really hard out in the burning sun," senior Shannon Small said. "Fortunately, we do not have the pleasure of running."

Along with the help and assistance of friends, a supportive coach guided players to reach their personal goals.

"Coach Davis is really nice," senior Ryan Tull said. "She does not push us past an extent we can not achieve."

Countless swings paid off as the guys took third in Regionals and the girls placed fourth in District.

"Overall, I think we played better than we ever have," junior Emily Wade said.

In spite of all the work golfers had time to relax, have fun and goof off; even on the green.

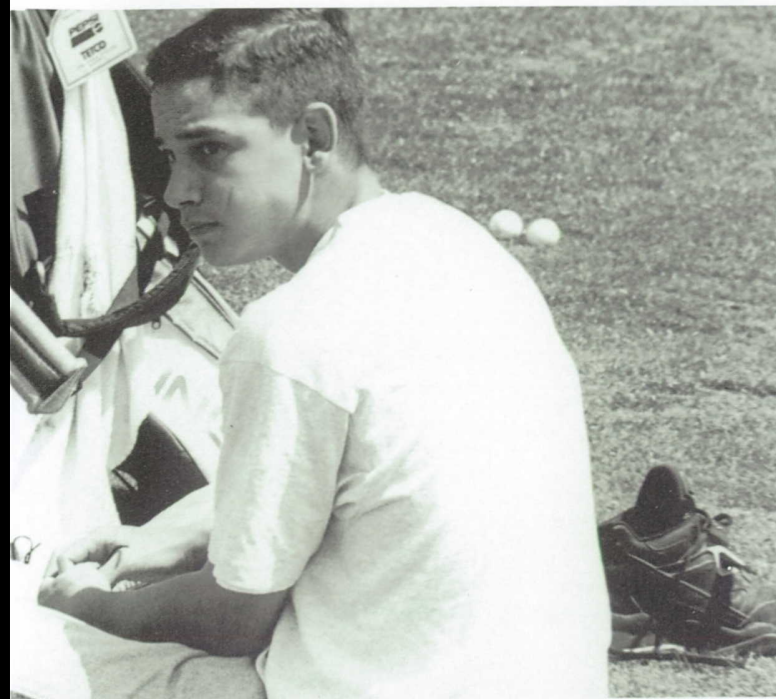

"A few times we got a little wild knocking the balls, and we almost always had fun," junior Patrick Mullins said. by Joel Darling

Spring Play

Football players get an early start

In the hottest part of the day, members of the football team trudged out onto the field for another session of spring football. A few hours out of the day were set aside for the training.

Various activities planned for the practice included lifting weights and working on plays and skills.

"I think that lifting weights will help the whole team get stronger and ready for the upcoming football season," freshman Blake Beall said.

Some players became involved in powerlifting along with spring training. These athletes focused on getting "pumped-up" during the off-season to prepare them for next season.

"Powerlifting is super for these guys," Coach Ray Nunez said. "The strength will be beneficial to them."

These dedicated football players learned not to be lazy during workouts and to work hard, if not harder, than another teammate. by Allison Enke

That's Power!

Moans and groans came from the weight room as senior Nathaniel Jansak-Noble pushed himself to the limit in the sport of powerlifting. Noble trained himself the past two years for the State meet and managed to come out on top.

"I have accomplished my goals by winning State and have realized how much work it is," Noble said.

Coach Ryder Warren's support at almost every meet paid off when State came around. By placing first in the 242 class and lifting a combined weight of 1,590, Noble was one of five men who qualified for Nationals at Arlington. His three best lifts included a 660 squat, a 400 bench, and a 530 dead-lift.

"The judges at Nationals were hard because they were world judges," Noble said.

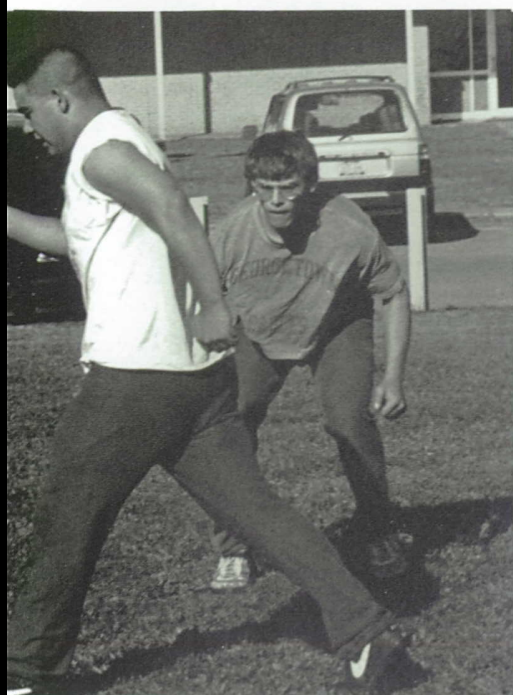

Noble paid for Nationals out of his own pocket. There, he lifted a combined weight of 1,577. Noble may go to the Junior Nationals or the World Championships in Oklahoma City, but he planned to attend college at Texas A&M University and to go into the veterinarian program. by Allison Enke

With the guidance of Coach Joel Holcomb, the student trainors learned how to tape weak or sprained ankles and how to prepare the players for each competition.

"I have learned a lot from Coach Holcomb, and he is an easy person to get along with," senior Denise Keller said.

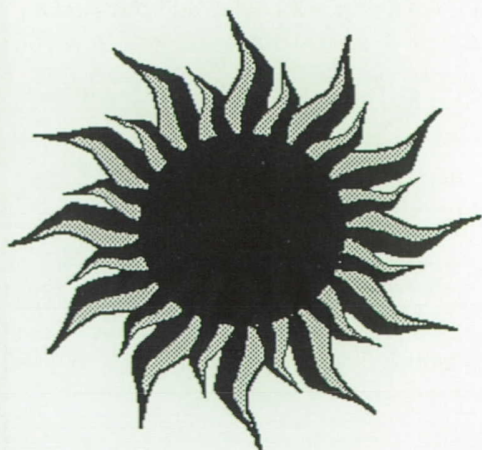

The time during the designated period for the trainors was spent getting the water ready and cleaning up. When preparing for any game, the trainors rushed to the field house in order to tape ankles, get the water to the field, and get dressed themselves.

"Football is one of the most exciting sports to train for," junior Maria Sanchez said. "Everyone is so pumped up and excited!" by Allison Enke

It's a good way to make new friendships.

It looks good on your college application.

Your picture will appear more than once in the yearbook.

Club functions are better than watching reruns of "Who's the Boss?"

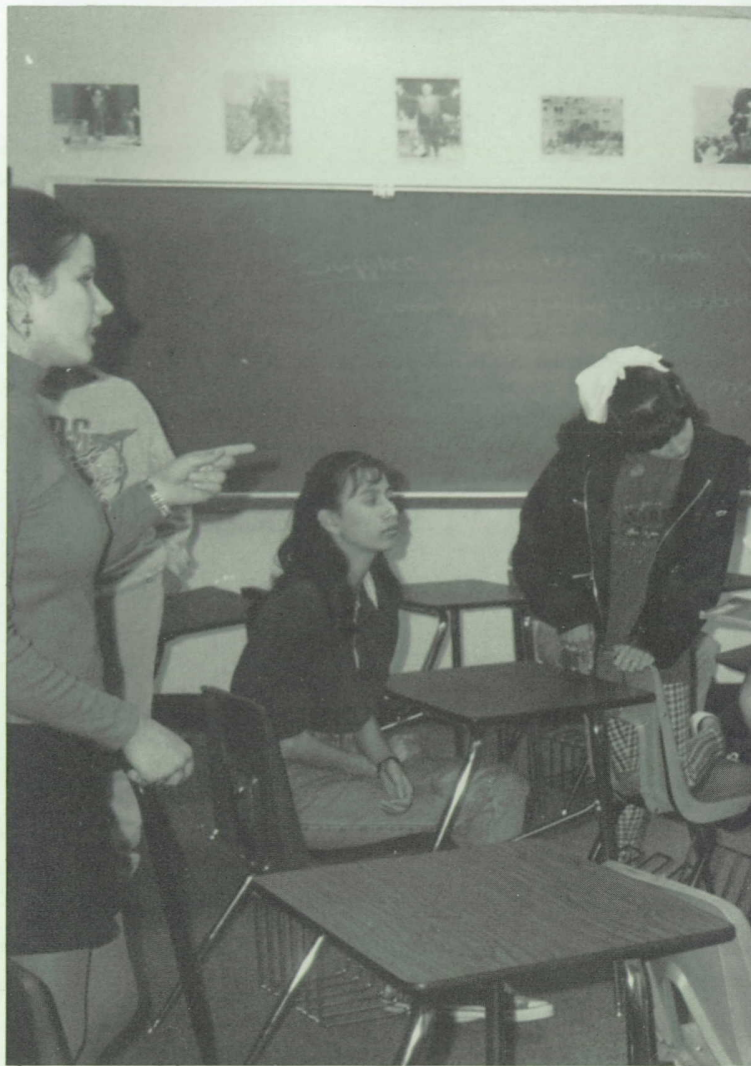

It gives you something to do besides getting in trouble with the cops.

It gives you a sense of fraternalism which can be compared to no other.

The order of business was themes of dances and other school related activities.

"It is a lot of fun decorating for the dances after the home football games," junior Christy French said.

The Student Council spent several hours decorating the commons for the school dances.

"It is a great experience," junior Brittany Rhodes said. "Not only do I get the chance to meet others, but I

The Path to Victory

The Band Marches on...

From Austin to Taylor, people had heard of the Eagle Band. The Eagle Band received its recognition due to the will and dedication of its members.

"During marching season we practically live for band," junior Teresa Wegner said.

The band spent extra time before and after school, in addition to class time, rehearsing together. The students would then be encouraged to practice further.

This work paid off, with the numerous plaques and trophies as evidence of this.

"It's hard work, but when its done right, it has its rewards, or awards if you will," junior Matt Buss said.

The band's continued successes greatly motivated its members. No new band students wanted to break the winning tradition of success.

The need to succeed continued even into the concert season. With marching season over, individual playing contests came into effect.

Depending on how well the musician placed at district, the individual obtained a seat in one of three concert bands.

"It has its advantages and disadvantages," sophomore Danielle Hartman said.

If the student made an uncharacteristic mistake at district, the decision as to their placement was still affected. Challenging for a higher band helped combat these few one-time errors.

"District is a big challenge," sophomore Phil Medina said. "I wish I could've gone."

When the year came to an end, the Eagle Band gave back to its senior members by playing at graduation.

"From friendships to personal satisfaction, the band was truly rewarding," senior Stephanie Leschber said. by Brian Bopp and Greg Leinweber

Sing, Sing, Sing

Choirs Sing to the Top

Numerous students enjoyed spending time enhancing their musical talent in choir. For instance, some preferred a choral sound which they found in Mixed Choir, while others enjoyed being more active in the Show Choir.

In past years, two choirs have represented Georgetown in competitions. Girls' Ensemble and the combination of Mixed Ensemble-Show Choir took the stage to present an award winning performance. Block scheduling along with the assistance of a new junior high choral director enabled director Bruce Johnson to add a Vocal Ensemble. He also separated the Show Choir into groups to create a higher quality of sound, and a complex blending of dance moves.

"With a separate class for Show Choir, we get much more done and have more time to perfect the moves," junior Bethany Schroeder said.

Each choir offered something to attract different types of people. Jazz music enticed some students to sign up for Vocal Ensemble, just as other reasons drew people to other choirs.

"I joined Girls' Ensemble because I feared trying out for Mixed," junior Leslie Brewer said. "That's not to say they aren't as good, because they work just as hard."

Though many students had variations to why they belonged to choir, they all agreed with one member.

"I just like to sing, and this is the place to do it," sophomore Candice Buchanan said. "Plus, I have gained many friends in here."

Separated by classes, all members came together to enjoy fundraisers, such as monthly paper drives, the annual fall concert, carol-ograms, and several other activities throughout the year.

The traditional talent show offered all students the opportunity to show their talents.

Solid Gold

Georgettes win big at contest

Face paint, fur, and big yellow balls made up the ingredients for fun for the Georgette dance team. The girls dressed up as cats of various species, shapes, and sizes while dancing with the band to music from the Broadway show CATS.

"I never, in a million years, dreamed that I would be dressing up as a cat to dance," freshman Angie Orton said. "But I really had a lot of fun doing it!"

Dancing and practices did not end with football season, however. The Georgettes began practicing self-choreographed lyrical, pom, and novelty dances to take to competitions in Houston, San Antonio, and Austin. These presented opportunities for members to take solos and ensembles to compete state wide.

"I was thrilled when our ensemble received best in state," sophomore Amanda Bullock said. "I was definitely not expecting that, and the experience was really gratifying."

The members received sweepstakes, super sweepstakes, and the "Gussie Nell Davis" award for all scores of 90 or above. Also, they received an award for overall best choreography for their novelty routine, and best in state and a special judges' award for their lyrical routine.

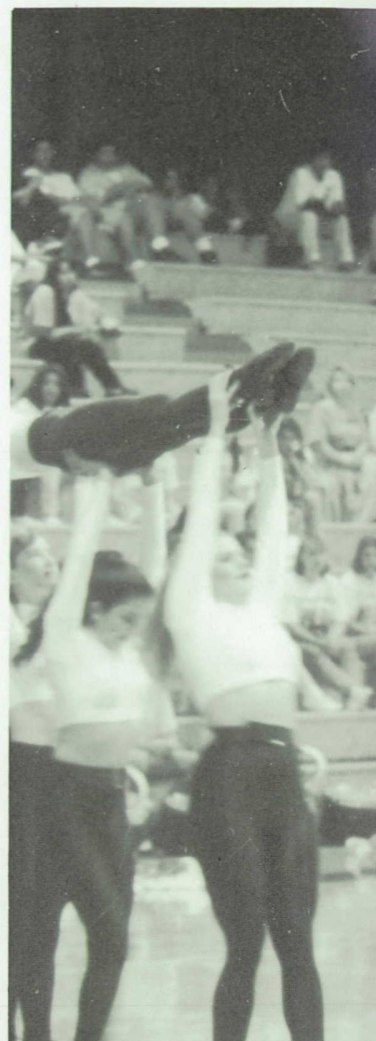

"This year's team has been outstanding," senior captain Amy Benold said. "Their level of dance has excelled throughout the year, and that proves that their hard work and dedication have definitely paid off." by Andrea' Smith

Gimme' an E!!!

Cheerleaders Support Eagle Teams

The year started at camp where the cheerleaders became better friends with each other and learned to bond.

"I enjoyed becoming closer to all the girls on my squad," junior Haley Kennedy said.

When the summer began, work for the upcoming year started. Time-consuming projects began early in the summer with painting signs in the hot sun, early morning practices, and a week long camp.

The camp attended by all cheerleaders taught them new cheers and chants.

"My summer wasn't like the years in the past," freshman Lindsey Roberts said. "It took hard work and dedication to come to early morning practices and paint in the hot sun."

Preparation for the upcoming year had been accomplished during the summer, but more work quickly snuck up on them.

"The pep rallies run so much smoother now that they are during school," junior Sabrina Jordan said. "Students had so much more spirit and got more involved in the chants to pump up the teams."

The gym boomed with the sound of screaming students. Cheerleaders spent long hours to make the pep rallies and other activities a big success.

Speaking in Tongues

Language Clubs Broaden Horizons

Foreign language clubs offered students the opportunity to expand their cultural horizons as well as time to group together with friends and serve the community.

Spanish, French, Latin, and German clubs provided members with several activities to fulfill these purposes.

Thinking of the Spanish club usually provoked images of sombreros and taco-eating contests. Sponsored by Spanish teachers, the club was in charge of the annual Miss Año Nuevo contest.

"It's very interesting to see guys dressed up as girls," junior Laura Brown said.

The funds earned through the contest aided senior club members in the form of scholarships. Recipients were Patrick Blanton, Bernadette Hinojosa, and Ann Michelle Pfluger.

Parlez vous Francais? The French club, led by sponsor Jan Stanford, planned popular fundraisers for the 15 members of the club.

Funds raised from candy sales and a raffled dinner for two became designated for a scholarship for a senior who had been a member of the club for at least one year.

Members of the club were not required to have a French course in their curriculum.

"I assumed that it would be a good thing for me to join the French club because I am taking French," junior Ryan Parks said.

The Latin club, known for its age-old tradition of selling candygrams during Christmas, enjoyed uniting and uncovering the meaning of the word fraternalsim.

"For Homecoming, we made togas for our nominees to wear. We play Mah-Jongg," senior Cecilly Clark said. "It's such a spectacular game!"

The German club, swollen with approximately 40 members, participated in numerous fundraisers and community service projects.

Whether wrapping gifts for the needy during Project Share or picking up trash along Texas highways, members and sponsors Pam Shultz and Leslie Blanton allowed plenty of time for celebration.

Club members took time off from their acts of good samaritanism for holiday parties, a lock-in and visits to German restaurants.

Earnings collected through the club's fundraising efforts were used for German club scholarships. The recipients were voted upon by club members.

"I feel honored to be included in this group of fine people and to be a member of this community oriented and fun-loving organization," senior Seth Cochran said. by Myra Hernandez

Say It With Feeling

Actions Speak as Loud as Words

Some drama and speech students found it difficult to separate their acting lives from their own everyday lives.

They often found themselves acting like the characters in their plays during class and while talking to parents, students, and friends.

"You can always find me speaking like we have to in speech," freshman Jamie Chandler said. "It just seems to wear off on you."

Drama and speech club members spent hours perfecting their plays and speeches for University Interscholastic League, UIL, competitions.

In order to achieve their goals of perfection and winning with grace, the students practiced during class, before and after school, and on the weekends.

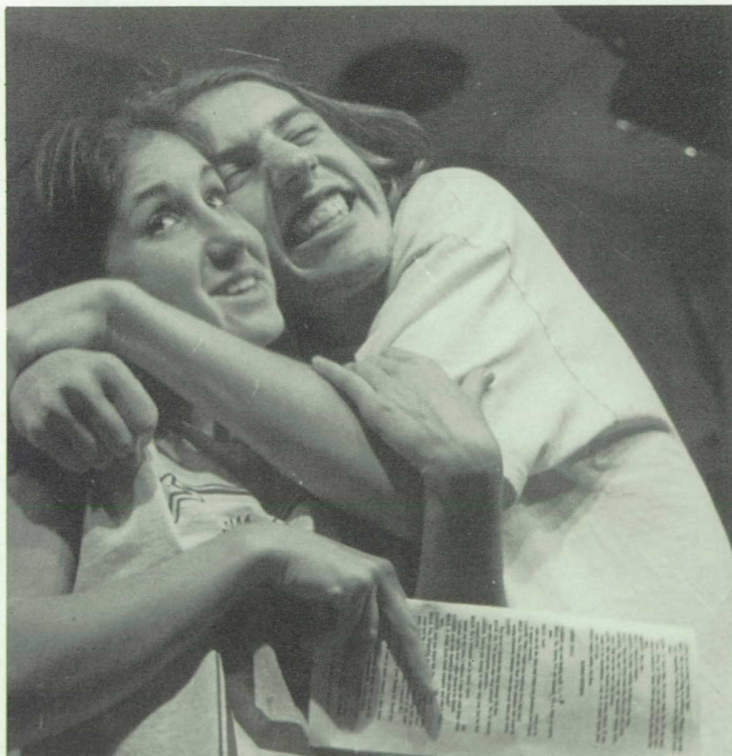

Under the direction of Tina McKay, the speech club competed in debate, prose, and poetry in both UIL and TFA tournaments.

"When we go to UIL and show off our talents, all of our hard work seems to pay off," sophomore Carrie Span said.

Under the guidance of Coach Monica Regan, the drama club took the One Act to UIL spring competition, advancing to Region in Houston.

Carla Jackson co-sponsored the club and watched her students perform in the Little Theater near the end of May for interested classes.

"It's more fun to act like someone else than to act like yourself, because being yourself gets boring," senior Zane Baker said. by Leah Vance and Tanya Fisher

Community Awareness Clubs seek various facets of service

Community service and awareness dominated the topics of discussion at any one of PAL, PRIDE, Unity or Key club meetings. These organizations achieved this through the various activities in which they participated throughout the community.

"I like being part of a group that presents me the opportunity to give something back to the community," senior Renee' Umstatt said.

The Key club, a service organization, not only visited Hospice patients, but was involved in helping with Caring Place fundraisers as well. While PRIDE, or Peers Responsible In Drug Education concentrated on promoting drug awareness within the high school and surrounding elementary schools. Members sponsored and participated in both "Red Ribbon Week" in the fall, and "Prom Promise" in the spring.

PALS, Peers Accepting, Learning, and Sharing focused primarily on children of surrounding schools. Each PAL provided friendship and understanding to an individual child, and encouraged pride and a sense of self-worth in their peers and in their "PALees."

"PALS was a wonderful experience for me," senior Allison Enke said. "It allowed me to interact with students both younger and older than myself."

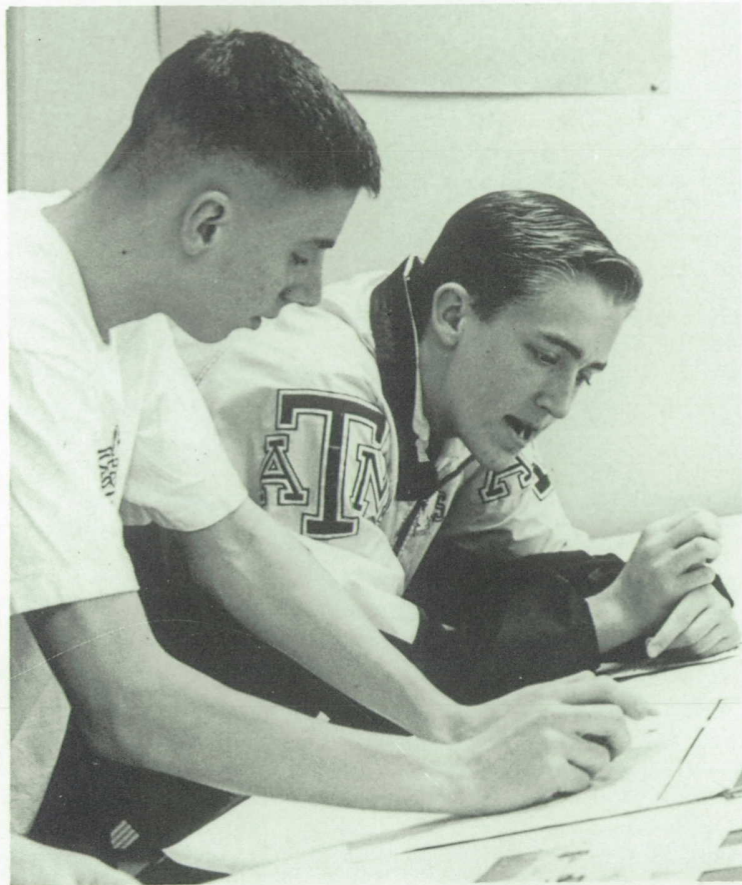

A new club, the Unity club, was founded to emphasize cultural likenesses as well as differences. It's primary goal aimed to celebrate everyone's heritage, to mingle with others of different cultures, and to diminish preconceived notions of a variety of cultures.

"I enjoyed meeting others and learning about different backgrounds besides my own," senior Lupe Riojas said. by Andrea' Smith

Write Away

Publications Demand Extra Time

As the temperature rose well above the 90's, dedicated Aerie staff members could be found spending numerous hours of their summer in room 222 finishing the yearbook. The Talon, on the other hand, worked diligently after school to meet deadlines that would enable them to get the newspaper out on time.

"At first it seemed like a sacrifice, but after all the coo-coo people, free food, and funny stories, it became worthwhile rather than a chore," junior Leah Vance said.

Vance, one of several staffers who came during the summer, headed the Clubs section.

Members of both publications enjoyed researching their subjects, typing and arranging articles and photos on a camera-ready page.

"By covering the stories of Student Life, I learned the different tastes and opinions that exist among the student body," junior Karin DeLuca said.

The articles written in both the Aerie and Talon covered nearly all aspects of teenage life.

"We write stories to create memories," junior Hillerie Staton said.

Although being on either or both of the publication staffs caused headaches and stress, it provided new experiences and friendships to all who remained a part of the Aerie, the Eagle's nest, or the Talon, the Eagle's claw.

"To give up my extra time meant I really enjoyed what I was doing," senior Allison Enke said. "Being on the staff was a lot of fun!" by Lupe Riojas

The Elite Club

It's Time To Hit the Books

It didn't make national television, but the Trivia Bowl of the National Honor Society did expose the brain power of its members.

Teachers asked questions. Members, grouped into teams, answered. Those with the most correct answers advanced.

The Trivia Bowl, which raised money for Saint Judes Hospital, took place after school in the library in May, one of several community service projects available to members.

They needed at least six hours of service projects a semester in addition to keeping a 90 average. They also had to attend all monthly meetings.

To become members, students had to have at least a 91 average. From this list, teachers recommended potential members.

The students received their National Honor Society certificates at the candle lighting ceremony.

"Induction was exciting," junior Alexis Wright said. "Luckily no one was set on fire."

The monthly meetings and projects gave the members a chance to converse about school activities.

"It is a good chance to get to know new people," junior Jonna Chambliss said. "And to do things for the community and the environment."

Those placing in the top five percent of their class received Rotary Scholar jackets and other forms of recognition such as a breakfast and halftime introduction at one of the football games.

"I enjoy being part of a club where I am surrounded by intelligent intellectuals that like to have fun," senior Amy Benold said. by Leah Vance

Clubs Combine History, Home, Health

History, strategy, children, and health care proved to be the interests of Junior Historians, Chess Club, Home Economics Relations Occupations, HERO, and Health Occupation Students of America, HOSA members. They all participated in activities that reflected their various facets of interest.

Each fall, the Junior Historians traveled to East Texas for the annual Renaissance Festival.

"It was fun to see what life was kind of like hundreds of years ago," senior Corrie McCollough said.

Members also performed still life skits of history over the years during the fall. They were also in charge of the Hall of Fame in which graduates of Georgetown were recognized for their contributions to the community.

Instead of stepping back in time, Chess club members passed the time every Thursday afternoon playing a game of chess. Led by teacher Julian Zapata, students learned the strategy of the time-honored game.

"I really enjoy the game," junior T.J. Leirman said. "It makes me feel very intellectual."

HERO members focused primarily on attaining home economic skills. In addition they learned how to work effectively with children of all ages.

HOSA concentrated on a career in the medical field. HOSA annually sponsored blood drives in both the fall and the spring. HOSA organized the spring blood drive to help Troy Williams' parents with expenses. Members also visited local hospitals in order to receive hands on experience in the field of health care.

"I want a career in the medical field because I love to help others feel better both physically and emotionally, and this field will allow me to do just that," junior Cherie' Carter said. by Andrea' Smith

Building Bridges

Teens Experience Possible Careers

Organizations such as TAME, BPA, DECA, and FTA prepared members for their future by expanding their knowledge in certain career fields which sparked their interest.

TAME, Texas Alliance for Minorities in Engineering, gave its members a chance to explore engineering fields, stressed the importance of math and science, and competed in local and state math and science competitions.

"TAME is really fun," junior Kaci Saenz said. "You get to meet a lot of new people and learn about careers in engineering."

BPA, Business Professionals of America, prepared students for the business work force through the advancement of leadership, citizenship, academic, and technological skills.

"It is a great club to be in," senior Amy Johnson said. "It prepares and gives benefits for college bound students interested in the business field."

DECA, Distributive Education Co-op of America, competed in district, state, and national level competitions where the competitors dealt with situations in a specific area.

FTA, Future Teachers of America, participated in programs helping the children and the teachers at the elementary schools. Students enhanced their teaching skills by assisting the teacher in planning, designing, and presenting visual aids.

"I love helping little kids," senior Jenny Blakely said. "A lot of what we do prepares us to become great teachers. There is always a need for those." by Karin DeLuca, Laurie Kimble, and Corrie Freisem

It Is Not What It Used To Be

Both Rodeo club and Future Farmers of America members shared a common interest... the love of animals. Rodeo club members worked towards the goal of keeping the American heritage of rodeoing alive. Members of FFA participated in livestock shows and several other competitions.

"I like being with other people who share the same interests as me," sophomore Traci Mott said.

Practicing was not something the Rodeo club took lightly. It involved an enormous amount of self-discipline.

"We try to practice every day and weekend," junior Deuce Green said. "It really pays off when you smoke a fast time at your rodeos."

The Rodeo club sponsored a barrel race jackpot on October 21, 1995 to raise money for the club's scholarship fund.

FFA participated in many activities, including the Williamson County Livestock

Show.

Members took care of their animals on their own time, either before or after school. However, animals were not needed to join.

"You don't have to raise an animal if you don't have time," sophomore Scott Schubert said. "But, it shows that you're more responsible."

The Path of June Cleaver FHA Members Learn What It Takes

Members of FHA, Future Homemakers of America, learned the needed skills to live on their own.

As adults, students could obtain jobs as chefs and housekeepers, or they could use these skills in their own homes.

Both the Culinary Arts

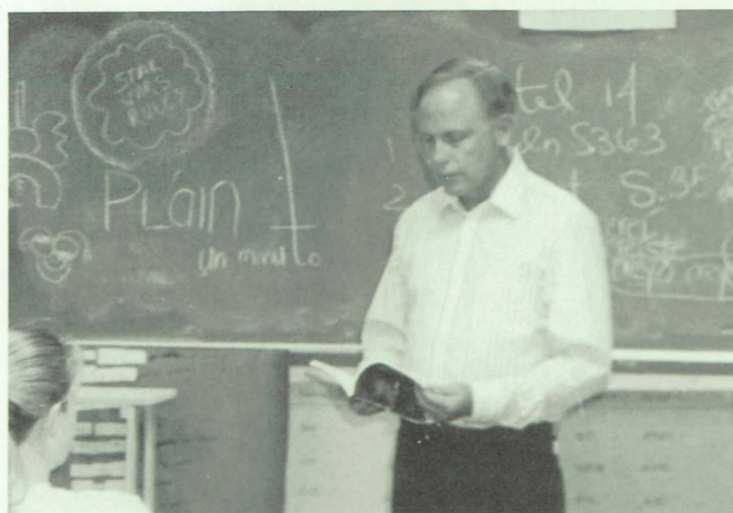

chapter and the Housing chapter of FHA had several fund raisers in order to raise money.

"Culinary Arts used fund raising money to visit training sites where we could sample and observe the making of cuisines," teacher Laura Sue Smith said. "I think the kids really enjoyed seeing a professional chef at work."

FHA gave students the opportunity to interact with others of like interests.

"Being in FHA has taught me the skills that I need to pursue a career in any type of food related job," senior Jose Ortiz said. by Hillerie Staton

Making a Difference

Clubs Service Community Needs

Serteen, Students for Seniors, and FCA were all about making a difference in the community.

Serteen, a community service organization, helped the community in a variety of ways. Some of the service projects they participated in included volunteering at Hoop it Up and cleaning up Cedar Breaks Park.

They helped host a MDA Telethon and served as waiters and waitresses at one of the Chamber of Commerce's dinners. Serteen also assisted the Sertoma of Georgetown with projects such as the car show held in the San Gabriel Park.

"Serteen is generally run by the students," English teacher Koren O'Kuma said.

They had a few socials and fundraisers, but overall their work was for service and not for profit.

Students for Seniors, another organization that provided service, focused primarily on the senior citizens of the community.

"I think Students for Seniors is a great idea," senior Amy Benold said. "We've needed a club like this for quite a while now."

Some of the members met together and made a list of senior citizens in the community they knew that needed help. The members helped these people around the house, mowed lawns, read to them, talked to them as a friend, and any other tasks that they were not able to do.

FCA, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, brought together Christian students to learn from each other and have Christian fellowship.

Praying was not the only item on the agenda. The members also played games and had serious talks that allowed the members to become closer.

"The best part about FCA is getting together with a big group of people and just having fun," sophomore Amber Wood said.

Their Bible study meetings included discussions over scenarios that Christian students could be faced with in a high school setting. Prayer for friends, family members, and teachers played an important role in the FCA meetings.

These clubs all shared a common focus: to better their community and themselves. by Brook Hampton and Leah Vance

MOVIN' ON UP

Drama 1-Act Advances to Area

For the first time in several years, the Drama department advanced to the third level of the University Interscholastic League's One-Act play competition with Marivaux's "La Dispute."

The play addressed problems in opposite gender relationships and asked the question, "Who is more deceiving, men or women?" The play centered around the idea of beauty and poked fun at those who stress beauty in their lives. The unexpected finale was enjoyed by both audiences and judges.

There was no set criteria for judging the One-Act play.

"It's not a horse race," director Monica Regan said. "It's very subjective." She explained that the decision was based largely on the judge's opinion. "It's just what one guy happens to think," Regan said.

Among the awards "La Dispute" received, Robert Palmer and Zane Baker accepted the honors for Best Actor. All Star Cast winners included Cherie Carter, Jessica Riedel, Ryan McElroy and Liz Parrot.

"Of all the plays I have worked on, this has been the most delightful," junior Robert Palmer said.

For months, the entire cast practiced after school in preparation for the competition. Such thorough rehearsals laid strong foundation for certainty within the cast.

Past and Future Learning the Neo-Classics

"Any questions?"

Both English and social studies classes often ended with this question, which the teachers usually asked while their impatient students packed their belongings in order to prepare to go to their next class.

"English and History will be my two most difficult classes," junior Matt Logue said.

While some students dreaded their social studies classes, others actually enjoyed them.

"It really depends on the teacher," senior Consuelo Miranda said. "Some really make their class exciting and others, well, you know."

Social studies taught students valuable lessons as well; teachers often claimed that they taught about the past so that students wouldn't repeat it.

Geography, another type of social studies, offered students a different type of knowledge.

"I like geography because you get to learn about different parts of the world," junior Amye Harris said. "You find out about different cultures, and you learn that everyone is not like you."

Students took an English class to represent each of the four years spent in high school.

Other more daring students elected to complete more than one English course in a year.

"Having three English classes is weird," senior Scott Machac said.

Handsful of Advanced Placement English students headed to the counselors' office, aching to be switched into regular English.

The Advanced Placement curriculum included more in-depth work, designed to prepare students for higher education.

As some regular English classes overflowed, Advanced Placement classes thinned out or completely disintegrated.

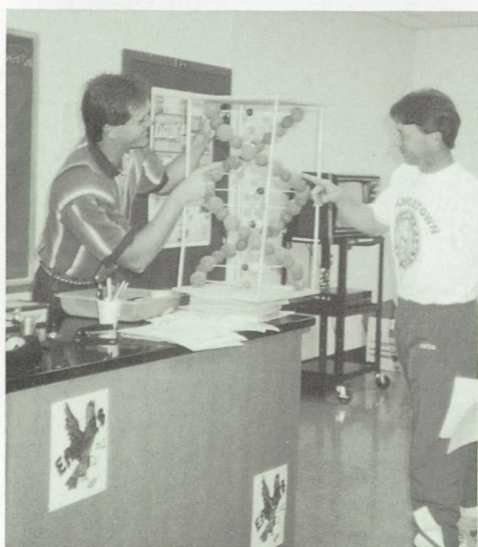

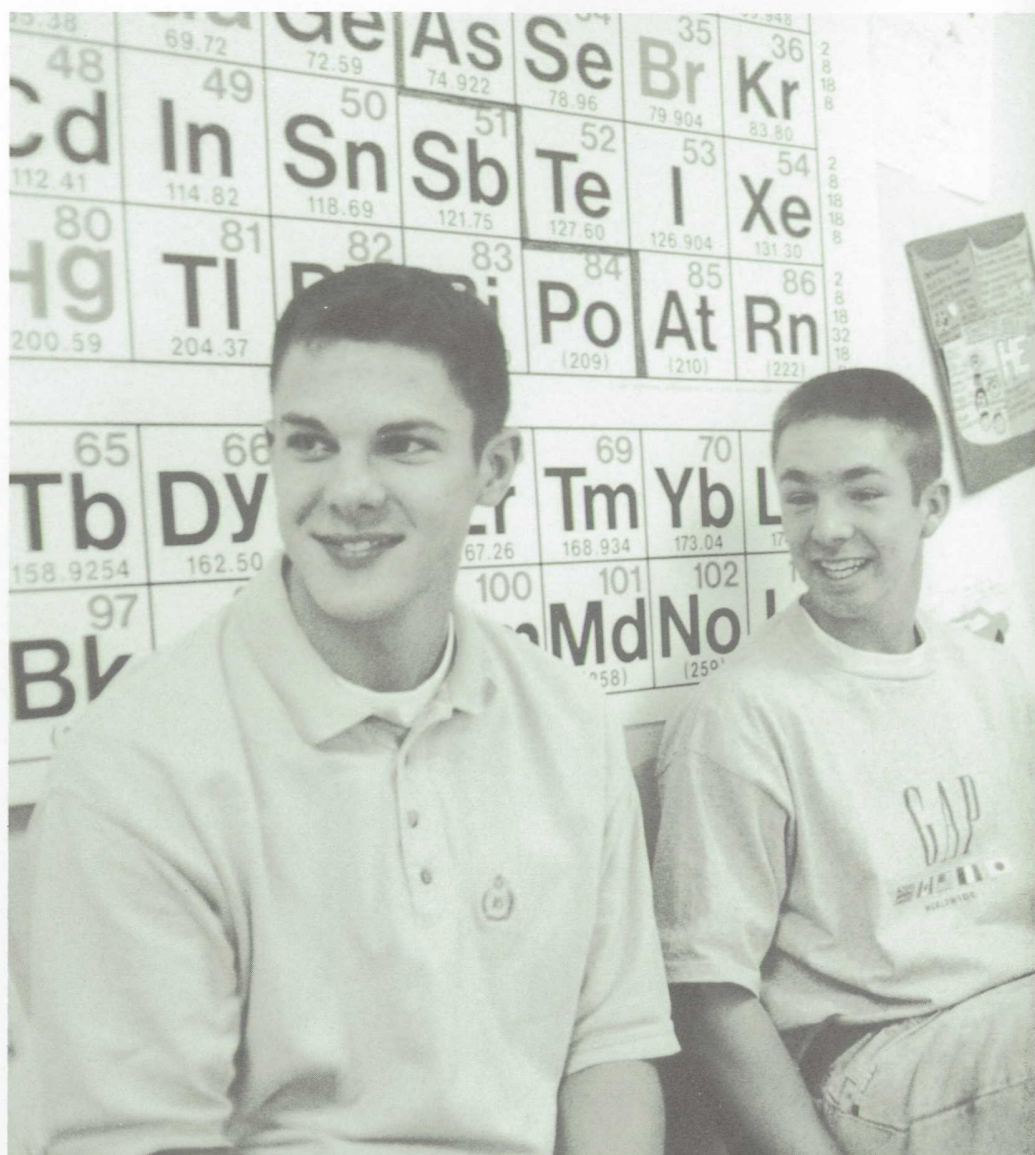

"Regular classes are much bigger than AP classes," senior Glenn Scott said.

Whether studying the Norman Invasion of England, or Romeo and Juliet, concerned students usually studied for hours in order to get their needed credits.

Labs Make Science Fun

Most of the varieties of sciences required some type of lab work. The natural sciences such as biology and Human Anatomy and Physiology concentrated on dissection labs, while the physical sciences concentrated on the mixing and experimenting of chemicals.

"The labs in physics are very time consuming," senior Tonya Schneider said. "It is hard unless you really know what you are doing."

For most students, labs provided a get-away from horrendous book work.

"I look forward to Chemistry labs because you can talk to your friends and you do not have to listen to the teacher lecture the whole period," sophomore Ryan Wiede said.

As well as giving students a break, labs caused frustration.

"Labs can be annoying when the complete opposite of what is supposed to happen happens," junior Heather Williams said.

Two Plus What?

Math Teaches Number Sense

Math: to some students, it proved to be the bane of their existence. For others, however, it offered an excellent opportunity for learning.

Math classes formed a major part of the core curriculum, and almost all students took some kind of math class during the year.

Whether it was one of the required courses such as Algebra I, II, or geometry, or an extra class such as trigonometry or calculus, a student's math class often served as the source of much confusion.

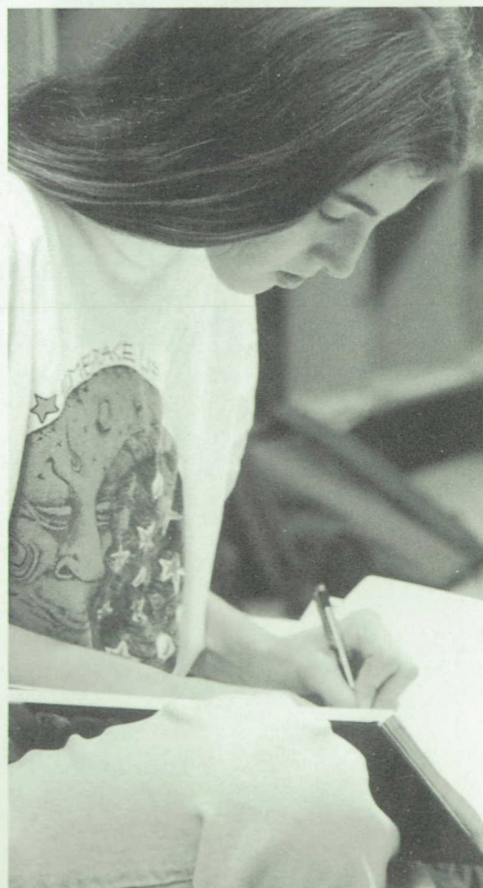

"I'm not good in math, but it's required," junior Emily Walters said.

Although quite a few students disliked math, they continued to take advanced courses such as calculus.

"I took Calculus to prepare me for college," senior Nichole Greenway said.

Some students enjoyed math, however, and appreciated its benefits.

"The higher math courses will enable me to receive my honors seal," junior Tracy Ferguson said. by Russell Hogg

Keeping Up

Advancing Continues

Although the freshmen didn't receive much respect from upperclassmen, they did hold a few advantages over their peers. Though lessers, the fish did contain more knowledge of computers.

To equalize that and to prepare students for the real world, a variety of computer courses existed. Certain maths and sciences could even be done on computers. Some students preferred this.

"All math should be put on computers," sophomore Mark Stoops said. "It would be easier."

To graduate, one credit of a computer course - such as computer math, computer science, or microcomputer applications - had to be taken. That did not mean students felt forced to take it.

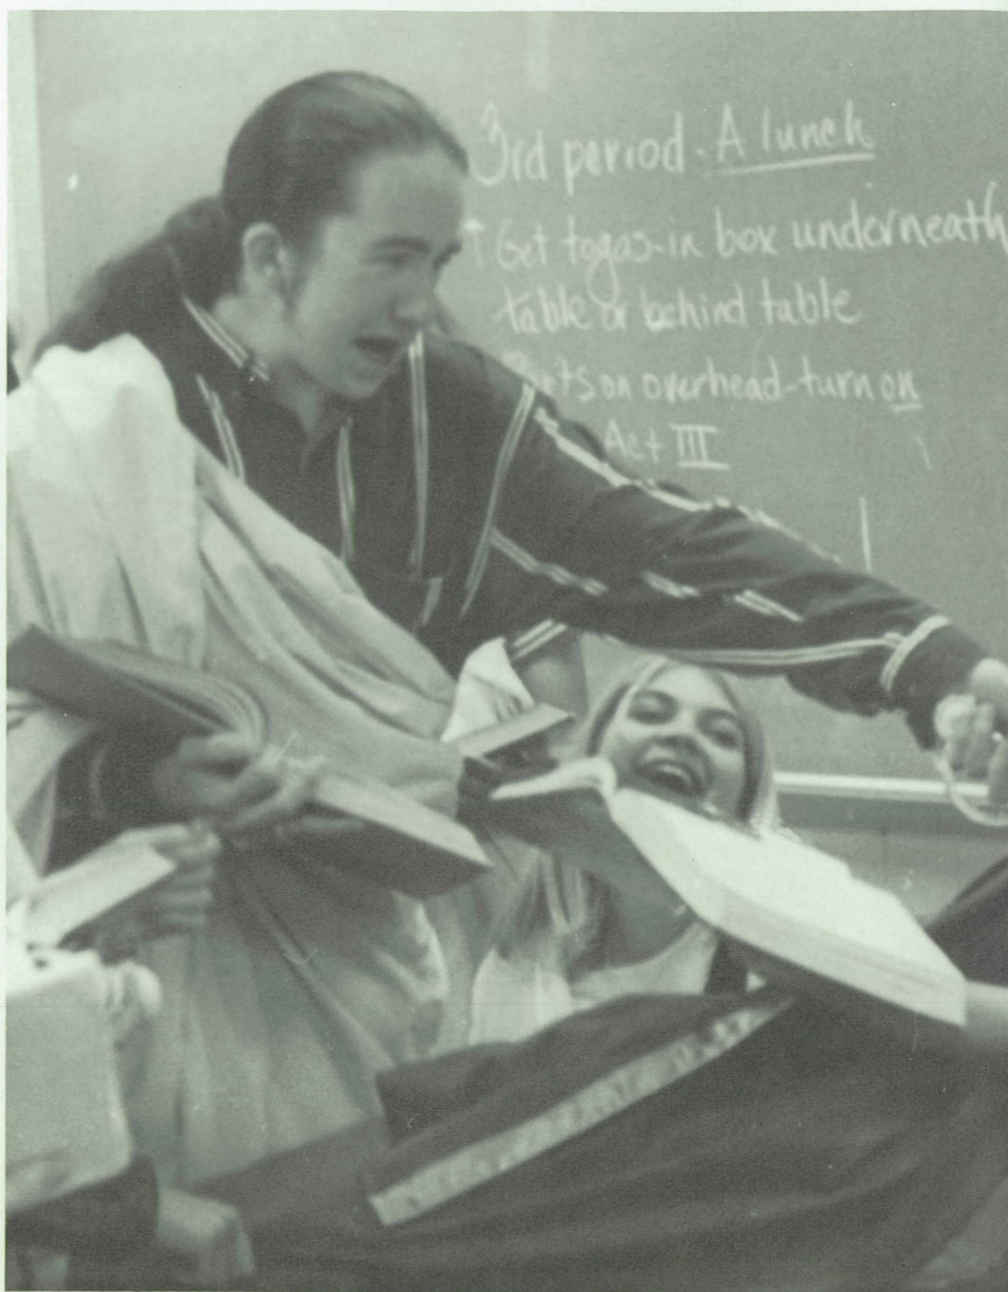

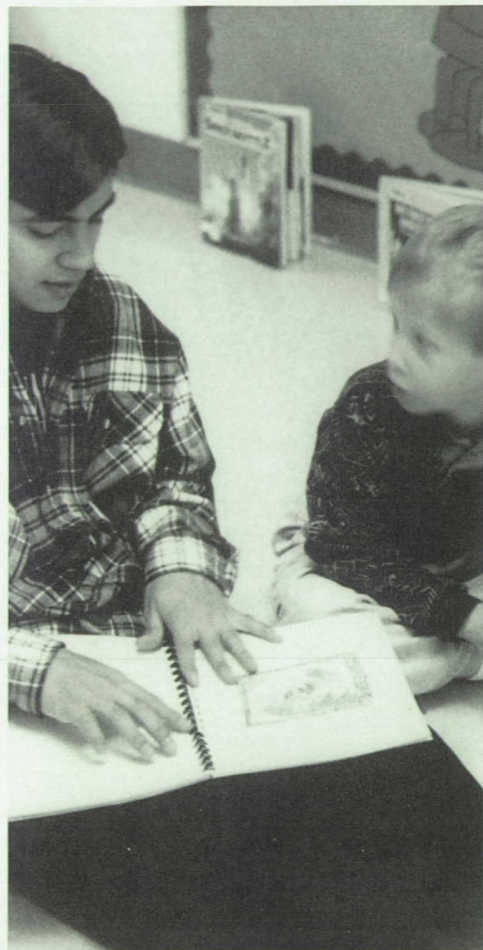

"Computer Science is a prerequisite for some colleges, but I have a personal interest in computers anyway," senior Mark Canales said.

As the world became high tech, the school tried to keep up. Students did not always agree with the way of the future, but they tried to understand it.

"Computers are useful when they want to be," junior Matt Buss said. by Joel Darling

Making the Grade

Tests, Projects Use Imagination

Since the beginning of time, man has had to prove his knowledge with one final show. In observance of this tradition, exams and projects completed the cycle of learning in all classes.

Whether teachers opted to use the standard written test, or stray into the outstretched and appealing arms of a project, preparation remained the key to success.

While some students lacked crucial study skills, others continued to place their faith in "clear your desk" testing tactics.

"I think I study more than the majority of people do," sophomore Jenifer Whatley said. "I like to feel prepared for all of my tests."

As a popular test alternative, group or individual projects gave both students and teachers a break from the ordinary methods practiced.

Projects also gave students tangible experience from which true knowledge blossomed.

"Projects are fun," junior Haley Kennedy said. "They're an easy test grade and we learn more this way."

In addition to practicing random modes of testing, certain teachers also elected to use not-so-new project ideas in order to lift students' interests and boost their knowledge.

Biology students had the opportunity to learn about the wildflowers of Texas by picking, identifying and cataloging them.

"I think that wildflower collection is the most time consuming, but at the same time, the most educational project the students can do," biology teacher Greg Carter said. by Myra Hernandez

ARTISTIC WORKS

Fine Arts Take Time and Effort

Fine Arts courses, although scheduling veterans, still proved to be popular course choices for students. Art, theater, music and dance classes provided outlets for students' creativity and windows for their talents.

False impressions of simplicity often occurred because of the constant interaction with others which was involved in the classes.

"Most people think art is a blow-off class, but I'm failing right now," freshman Mike Tobertson said.

In fact, students needed long hours of practice and study in order to achieve the levels of development necessary.

Theater students memorized their lines, drill team members needed all the right moves, choir members had to be in tune, and the band had to march to the beat of the same drummer.

"Choir requires many hours of practice to create a balanced sound," senior Joel Darling said. "It is rewarding to produce music, rather than just notes."

Art students soon learned that their days of simply doodling were over.

Skills such as shading and balancing were taught in class so that the students could use these elements for larger projects.

"I expected art to just be drawing a lot of still life, but it was more involved than I had anticipated," senior Lupe Riojas said. "It takes much more skill than most people think."

No matter the course, attaining goals was impossible without commitment and hard work on the students' parts. by Myra Hernandez

Decisions

Electives Add Spice

From A, art, to Z, zoology, well, maybe not yet for zoology, but at the rate of progress, zoology may well be on the selection of electives someday soon. Still students had a wide variety of electives to choose from.

"Filling out your schedule is harder than it seems," junior Jessica McGough said. "There are many classes that you want to take and others that you need to take, which makes it difficult to fit them all in."

Classes such as journalism and art helped students to explore new ideas and ways of thinking.

"I have enjoyed taking both journalism and photojournalism," junior Jennifer Gosset said. "It gives me a chance to express new ideas both on paper and in pictures."

Welding, construction, and auto-mechanics allowed students to work and create with their hands, not just their minds.

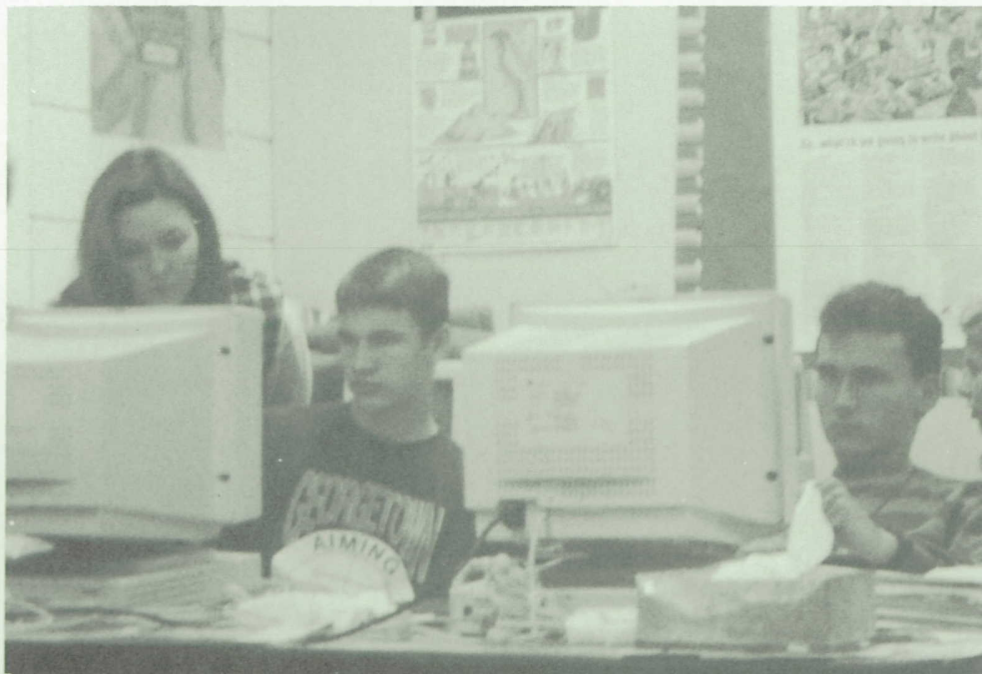

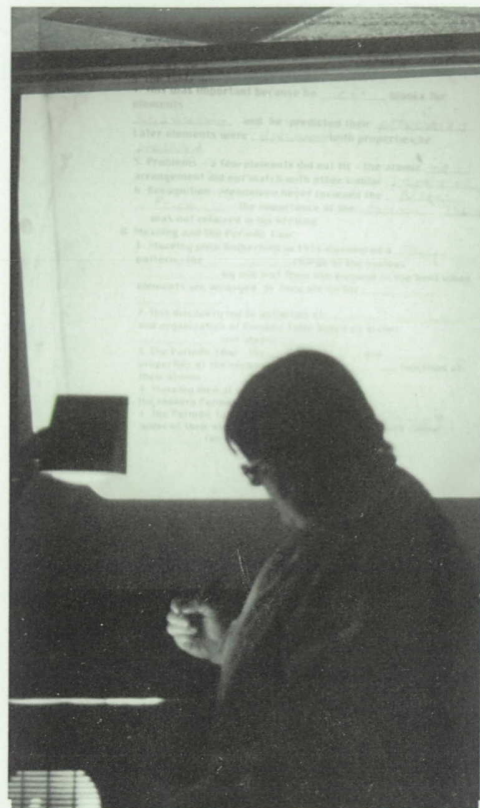

Students also chose electives that would aid them in their future career choices.

"Health Science Technology has helped me to get a feel of the medical field," junior Luis DelValle said. "And it lets me know now, not later, if I want to pursue a career in it."

The degree of difficulty also helped students to decide how to fill their schedules.

"I tried to keep my mental capacity in tact by taking art, which is fun, and calculus, which works a different part of my brain," senior Bernadette Hinojosa said. by Leah Vance

Stepping Stones Courses Lead to Careers

With a certain formula, some high school courses could count as college credits. Students who displayed interest in acquiring innovative backgrounds for college and possible job opportunities enrolled in career and technology courses.

These classes offered students the information to develop skills useful in the workplace.

"Career and technology classes will help the students achieve goals for future employment," culinary arts teacher Laura Sue Smith said.

Under the guidelines given by the Texas Education Agency, the courses were divided into 15 groups called career pathways. A majority of these pathways offered limited articulation, or possible college credit, at certain establishments.

"Taking articulated classes is one way for students to know if this is a career that they want to pursue," career specialist Carol Winter said.

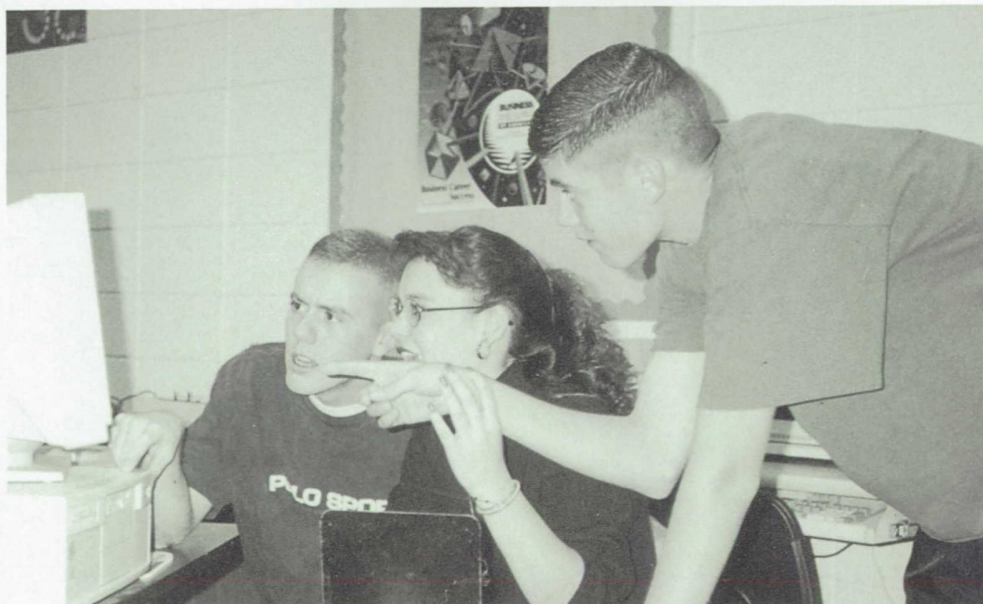

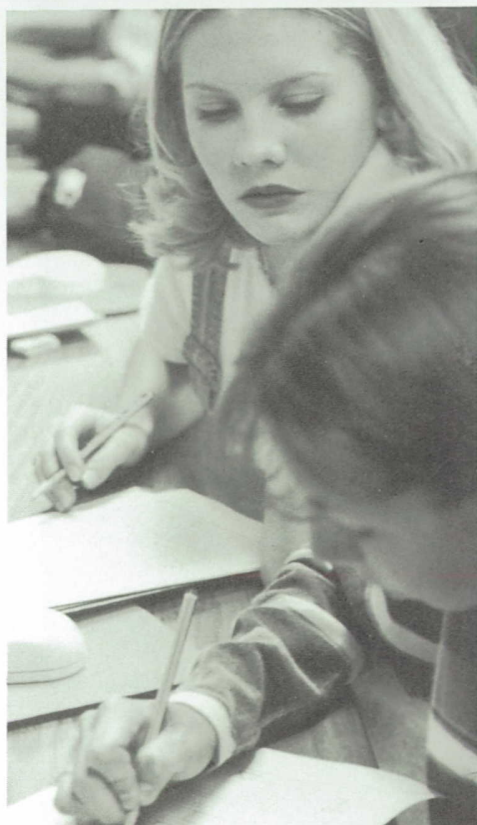

Because articulation availability varied among pathways, classes such as the Health Science technology courses offered alternative benefits. The certifications which were offered served as strong incentives for students to take these courses.

"The program at school has helped me to get into college and to figure out what level of medicine I want to go into," senior Beth Trainor said. "It really does make a big difference." by Myra Hernandez

You are loved.

Can you see it in the sunset and in the moonlight.

Can you feel it in the cool breeze and in the warm sunshine.

Can you hear it whispered in the leaves and shouted in the mountain streams.

Can you smell it in the air perfumed with flowers and fragrant green grass. It is a gift.

You are Loved.

Humorous Happenings

To lighten up the atmosphere created by the block schedule, in its second year, teachers and students alike displayed humorous escapades. This change in behavior put most at ease and lifted spirits to build a better working environment.

"I enjoy bringing laughter into the classroom because it makes the day go by quicker," junior Kelly Andreasen said.

Others opted to participate on a larger scale by continuing the senior prank. Several seniors vandalized the school buses by letting the air out of tires; however, the plan backfired. While the not-so-funny prank inconvenienced high school students and cost the district time and money, small, young elementary students had to wait hours before being picked up to be taken to school. Those involved saw the virtual reality of their thoughtless deeds and, after a visit with administrators, volunteered to pay for the cost incurred and donated community service time.

Not many found the prank humorous, but on the lighter side during Senior Challenge day a small food fight broke out and quickly subsided.

"The best time was the free time," senior Consuelo Miranda said. "And they gave us enough of that to visit and to catch up on the latest happenings."

Teachers also found moments where they could relax and have meaningful conversations with their classes. Some even shared their talents to entertain the class.

"Mr. Hud's use of combining his talents and techniques helped me better understand the whole concept of waves, waves of sound and of light," junior Reyhan Ricklefs said. "In addition to being a great teacher, he's a fine musician!"

Good teachers and good students contributed to the Blue Ribbon School award. The school received the award for the outstanding programs available to students. The week after graduation, Principal Mike Cargill, English teacher Teresa Cavender, and junior Miki Wilkins traveled to Washington D.C. to receive the prestigious award. by Lupe Riojas

Remember When

... Lack of winter and spring rain brought about drought conditions

... A jury found O.J. Simpson not guilty

... Dallas Cowboys won Superbowl XXX

... Madonna - mother to be

... Dole won the Republican Primaries

... Atlanta Braves won the World Series

... Unibomber was arrested

... Preparations for the Olympics began in Atlanta

... Stand off in Montana

... Michael Jackson and Lisa Marie Presley get divorced

... Bill & Hillary White-water investigation, FBI files, etc.

... American troops sent to Bosnia

... Southwest Conference played its last games of football, basketball, and baseball as a conference

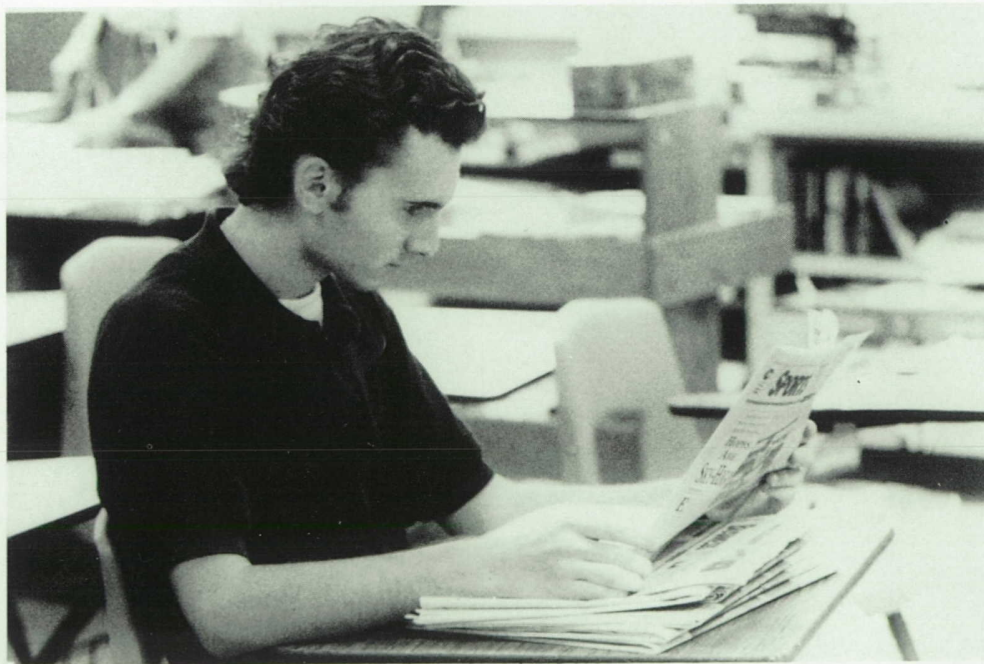

... George Burnes & Dean Martin - may you rest in peace

... Chicago Bulls had the best regular season record in the NBA (and went on to claim the crown)

POOL SHARKS... Prior to practice, the swim team waits to stretch. Stretching played a key part in building endurance. photo by Kelly Andreasen

Conquering Paths

As our reflections of The Path Once Taken wind down, we come to the fork in the road where we are faced with making mature and responsible decisions. The choices we make now will lead us through the next step down a new path. We look forward to the challenges that lie ahead, having guided us to our destinies along the paths once taken. by Lupe Riojas and Bernadette Hinojosa

WHO'S AHEAD? Catching up on the latest sports action, junior Alex Dumitrescu reads the sports pages to find out how his team did. Several classes encouraged students to read newspapers to stay informed on current events. photo by Danny Kilpatrick

*... it's been fun,
but the best
is yet to be ...*

Josten's Publishing Company printed the 50th volume of the Aerie yearbook. Using the darkroom to produce all black and white pictures, staff photographers and photojournalism students took all the pictures with the exception of class photos taken by George Giddeon and Associates of Delmar Studios. Staff members designed all layouts and graphics, developed the theme with Palantino and various other fonts and paste up pages, using Pagemaker 2 and 4.2 on Macintosh Computers. We would especially like to thank our advisor, Pat Easterling, for all the great advice and encouragement throughout the year.
